Cuts Silver Price

WASHINGTON.—A surprise proclamation by President Roosevelt reduced the government price for newly mined silver from domestic sources 13 cents an ounce. The new order does not affect foreign silver purchases and domestic silver producers still will draw a bonus over the world price. (Details in financial section.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—From Democratic and Republican ranks in congress and from the nation's industrial leaders there arose today a lusty, collective Bronx cheer to greet the statement of the Roosevelt administration that a business sitdown strike brought on the new depression.

Even some of the President's hitherto most ardent supporters refused to swallow the explanation made in a series of denunciatory addresses by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson that monopolistic practices and a general strike of business had presented the Roosevelt administration with a depression.

Flays Labor Practices.

"If the administration is going to attack business, it also should turn its attention to some labor practices," said Senator Marvel M. Logan [D., Ky.], one of the fervent Roosevelt supporters in congress. "Labor has become just as tyrannical and just as arbitrary as business."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt indicated at his regular press conference that he was getting ready to bail out of the trial balloon sent up with the Ickes and Jackson assaults on business. The President's attitude today, when asked whether he indorsed the Ickes and Jackson blasts, tended to confirm earlier reports that his annual address on the "State of the Union," in which he will discuss his plans for dealing with the depression at the opening of congress on Monday, will be constrained and conciliatory.

Set Stage for President.

Reports emanating from the administration councils were that Jackson and Ickes set the stage for the President's address, with their fulminations against monopolies and business, as a concession to the radicals of the Democratic party, but that Mr. Roosevelt himself would follow with a temperate discussion, seemingly meek by contrast.

Using the words of Theodore Roosevelt, the President said the attacks by his administration on business were directed only at certain "malefactors of great wealth" and not at all rich men. He said the questions concerning the Ickes and Jackson diatribes reminded him of an episode in Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

When the earlier Roosevelt used the term "malefactors of great wealth," the President declared, certain elements accused him of calling all persons of great wealth malefactors. This, Mr. Roosevelt charged, was a deliberate twisting of an interpretation and not in conformance with the facts. They knew English at that time, they know it now and he knows it, the President added.

Persistent Questions Fail.

The President sought to convey the impression that certain elements were deliberately trying to place the administration in the position of attacking all business. Persistent questioning as to what "malefactors of great wealth" he had in mind brought no enlightenment from the President.

Continuing his series of conferences with industrial leaders, Mr. Roosevelt conferred today with Myron Taylor, retiring board chairman of the United States Steel corporation, before retiring to his study to put the finishing touches on his message to congress. The President said his discussions with private utility executives would be resumed on Tuesday, but he refused to identify at this time the men who are coming for the conference.

After the White House visit Mr. Taylor refused to discuss his con-

MADMAN SLAIN AFTER 5 DAYS' TERROR AT SEA

Describe Duel Fatal to Boat Owner.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—The ill-fated pleasure yacht Aafje's voyage of piracy and terror was engineered by a former convict with a long criminal record who was seized by a mad desire to emulate the swaggering rogues of Spanish Main days, federal agents revealed tonight.

Jack Morgan, who shot and killed the yacht's owner, Dwight L. Faulding, and was later slain himself by fellow passengers, twice served prison sentences for rape and was sent to jail on other occasions for burglary and theft.

Federal investigators also revealed new details of the desperate gun duel between Morgan and Faulding as the latter tried to save his ship; the passengers' attack on Morgan after five days of terror under his iron rule, and an 8 year old boy's narrow escape from death on the yacht.

Describe Duel to Death.

The Aafje was still within sight of San Pedro harbor lights, ostensibly on a two days' cruise to Catalina island, when Morgan attempted to take over command of the yacht, the survivors related.

Pistol in hand, he ordered Faulding away from the wheel. Faulding believed he was drunk and tried to reason with him.

"This will never do. Let's be friends," the ship's owner said.

Morgan's answer was a bullet which tore through Faulding's shoulder.

"It's too bad. I'm sorry you did that," was all Faulding said.

He staggered from behind the wheel and went down the front hatch to his quarters. Obtaining his own revolver, he climbed the rear companionway. Sighting Morgan near the wheel, Faulding took aim and fired, but his aim was bad.

Morgan in turn fired twice, both slugs striking Faulding in the chest. In a last effort, Faulding drew himself up to the level of the hatch and took aim again. But a fourth shot from Morgan's gun struck him in his forehead and he fell back dead.

Turns on Other Passengers.

Morgan then turned like a raging madman on the other passengers. They were his own wife, Mrs. Lillian Casanova Morgan, an expectant mother; her nurse, Miss Elsie K. Berdan; Mrs. Gertrude Turner, sweetheart of Faulding; her son, Robert, 8 years old, and two young deckhands, Robert Horne and George Spernack.

When he realized his adversary was dead, Morgan thrust his revolver into the belt of his trousers and strutted across the deck.

"Go get me that other gun," he ordered Spernack.

The youth climbed down the hatchway, terror stricken, he told federal agents, and picked up Faulding's gun, which lay near the body. He handed it to Morgan, who promptly thrust it into the other side of his belt.

Apparently intent on taking his captured vessel farther out to sea, Morgan swung the yacht southward. With his guns always at hand, the new pilot ordered the passengers about like slaves.

For hours after the shooting Faul-

TERRORISM FORCES CHURCH TO CHANGE HOUR FOR SERVICES

New York, Dec. 31—[Special.]—Terrorized by a two months epidemic of beatings and holdups in the Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, parishioners of the Roman Catholic church of the Holy Rosary celebrated their annual New Year's eve holy hour services tonight one hour earlier than usual under the protection of a special police detail. The Rev. Father James A. Sullivan, rector, advanced the services from 9 to 8 p. m. to enable his congregation to go home while store lights were still burning and before the streets became deserted. Several of the Holy Rosary church parishioners have been beaten and robbed recently.

IF CLOTHES MAKE THE MAN FRANK IS QUITE A BOY

A grateful citizen who wouldn't hurt a friend's feelings for the world was picked up by the Oak Park police last night wearing five neckties. They were in the latest and most flamboyant shades, each tied nicely.

He said he'd been visiting a friend at Hines hospital, but the police insisted he take off his clothes for a search. It took nearly an hour. Besides the five ties, he had on five pairs of trousers, three vests, a suit of woolen underwear, six shirts, two sweaters, six pairs of sox, and next the skin a sheep-lined vest.

He gave his name as Frank Wodniakewski of 4705 Hutchinson avenue. He said he wore the ties because he was always meeting the friends who gave them to him, and when they asked how he liked their presents he could prove his pleasure at their gifts.

NAZIS PROHIBIT USE OF GUNS TO GREET NEW YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—The Germans tonight celebrated the arrival of the new year in much the regular fashion, although this year they were forced to observe certain official "verbotens." Guns may not be fired at midnight, explosive crackers may not be lighted on the streets, and naughty greetings and postcards may not be forwarded. Dog owners were urged to keep their pets at home, because many become frightened by the uproar and run away and get lost.

Court Dignity Bows to an Old Arab Costume

To the mind of a bailif, a hat is a hat and should not adorn the head in the dignity of a courtroom. The bailif mind makes no distinction. They are all the same—a hat, cap, helmet, turban, beret, or fez.

Abdul Krim.

The reaction therefore of Bailif Carl Tufo was prompt yesterday when his eye spotted the towering figure of an olive skinned man moving majestically toward the bench of John J. Lupe. Well over 6 feet, the man's height was increased by a tall head covering of beaver fur.

Full Speed Ahead.

With oriental calm the tall stranger ignored the summons. Indifferent to the Tufo glare or the Tufo speech, he plowed on through a sea of litigants. Bailif Tufo got help—Bailif John Miller. Together they heaved out man and hat.

Thinking his action also should have judicial approval, Bailif Tufo whispered of his deed to Judge Lupe. The judge ordered the hat-man returned. In came the stranger.

"I am Abdul Krim," he said in simple dignity. And indeed he might have been his famous namesake, Abd-el-Krim, Moorish warrior whose Riffian marksmen held off the colonial armies of Spain and France for years.

How Come, Abdul?

"Why do you wear a hat in court?" questioned Judge Lupe.

"I am an Arab," replied Mr. Krim. "In my veins courses the purest blood of Arabia. I am a Moslem. It is my religion to wear the fez at work, at home, and everywhere. I am a butcher. I wear the fez at butchery. Why not here?"

Judge Lupe decided Abdul might wear his hat. Then came the matter of an oath, for Abdul wanted a divorce from his wife, the former Sallie Brown of 709 East 45th street. Again court practice yielded. Abdul was not required to take the usual oath with a Bible. Instead he swore to tell the truth—by the beard of the prophet.

And then Abdul, who lives at 29 East 47th street, obtained his divorce on the ground of desertion. His divorce was the last granted in 1937.

IT'S SAME HEADACHE BUT COST LESS THAN IT DID IN OLD ROME

If you think your head is the heaviest and your pocket the flattest of all time today, you're wrong. Heads throbbed on New Year's for centuries before wassail was even English, and $5 a seat for a floor show is a loving gift compared with the squeeze the emperors put on the Romans on Jan. first.

It started as a celebration of the winter solstice. In old Rome it was the Saturnalia, even as now. Then Julius Caesar changed the calendar and delayed the opening of the New Year a few days until the first of the month honoring Janus. He was a two-faced god who looked both forward and back.

In the Rome of the empire the heads of the state exacted presents at New Year's. They got so greedy that Claudius finally set up a schedule to make it legal.

New Year's is celebrated with visits, drinks, food, drinks, songs, drinks, dances, drinks, and just drinks in most of the world.

WARDEN'S PLAN RINGS NO BELL WITH THE FELONS

Just no privacy! If Joliet and Stateville convicts have thought previously that guards and the warden were nosey, they will know it now. Warden Joseph E. Ragen announced yesterday he has acquired a gadget known as a mattress detector.

Starting Monday, a portable photo electric cell will be wheeled past the cells daily and all mattresses will be brought out for inspection.

If any of the boys have taken their tin soldiers to bed with them, or their electric trains, dirks, pistols or saws, a bell will ring and ring.

Battered Cuspidor Ousted by Illinois Woman Judge

Watseka, Ill., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Judge Jessie Sumner, Illinois' first woman county judge, has included the interior of her courtroom in her drive to "clean up." An old cuspidor, battered and bent from many years' usage, was replaced today by a modernistic ash tray.

Rebels Enter Teruel; Relieve Besieged Force

158 Yankees Trapped

HONGKONG—Japanese flyers bomb Canton-Hankow railway in South China; 158 Americans on refugee train from interior isolated. Page 4.

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 31.—(AP)—A broadcast from Salamanca, Spanish rebel headquarters, tonight announced that Gen. Francisco Franco's troops had battered their way into Teruel and relieved the garrison of insurgents within that east Spanish city. There was "indescribable enthusiasm," the broadcast said, when a relief column made contact with the garrison, which has been besieged in buildings of the town since loyalist forces captured it Dec. 21.

The number of the insurgent garrison still alive was not revealed. When Teruel fell to the loyalists an estimated 3,000 insurgent troops and as many women and children took refuge in stone buildings, including a monastery and the Bank of Spain building, which they turned into fortresses.

Fighting Halts at Nightfall.

Government troops blew up the bank and the seminary, and the survivors fled to the Santa Clara convent, near by, where they continued their resistance until relieved today.

A late report said operations halted at nightfall and that the insurgents planned total occupation of Teruel tomorrow. The announcement said the right flank of Franco's forces occupied the southern suburbs of the city, while the left flank took the city's cemetery.

Though some sections of Teruel remained in government possession, reports from rebel aerial scouts were said to indicate "the tragic nature" of the loyalist "rout." Roads out of Teruel were reported jammed with refugees.

Rebels Take Muela.

Earlier the insurgents reported the capture of Muela, key position of the government defenses, southwest of Teruel. A dispatch from government territory admitted the insurgents recaptured a strategic position—apparently Muela.

Military experts believed that the loss of Muela would force the fall of Teruel itself and possibly prepare the way for an insurgent drive to the Mediterranean. The fighting on the twelve mile semicircular Teruel front has developed prospects of becoming a decisive action, they said.

200,000 Men Engaged.

At least 200,000 men were believed to be in the battle which has raged night and day since the insurgents counterattacked a week ago in an effort to regain Teruel, perhaps the most strategically vital position in Spain.

Teruel formerly was the point of a rebel salient in loyalist territory, and was considered a good starting point for a rebel drive to the sea to split government Spain. The government's capture of the town was considered one of its greatest victories.

1938 IS TOAST OF THE TOWN IN HOME AND CAFE

CELEBRATION PHOTOS!

Turn to back page for photos of 1938 celebration which jammed loop streets.

A gigantic crowd of New Year's eve revelers, estimated by veteran trafic policemen as the heaviest in recent history, jammed the loop at midnight and early today. Motor trafic was tied up in several places and street cars were completely stopped at intervals. The heaviest crush occurred in State street, north of Madison. At that intersection a drug store window was caved in. One man was hurt. Four squads of police were called to untangle the congestion. At Dearborn and Madison streets a celebrator was slightly wounded by a stray shot. Details on page 2.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Traditional revelry ushered 1938 into Chicago. Amid riotous merriment in hotels and cafés, usually staid citizens drowned their dignity, put on funny hats and kissed their own or their neighbors' wives at the strokes of midnight.

But these folk who shook the noise and the news were only part of Chicago's celebrators. In an attempt to learn how Chicago in the mass awaited the new year, more than a hundred of the people who make news the other 364 days of the year were interviewed by telephone. Calls disclosed that a majority of them, like a majority of their fellow citizens, great or humble, were holding their watch parties where they always have held them—at home.

Bright Spots Crowded.

In the entertainment centers, managers said that the celebration was the largest and wildest of the present decade. Attendance was stimulated by price scales materially below those of last year, and as usual, New Year's eve was one night when every one present was a free spender.

Police were tolerant of prankery and boisterousness during the night, but one class of celebrators, the drunken drivers, felt their wrath. In spite of publicity campaigns by safety organizations, there was an increase in the automobile massacre. An unusual number of hit and run cases were reported, as erring motorists chose to flee from their victims rather than explain the fumes in their breath.

Home Popular with Leaders.

Out of the society, business, financial, political and professional leaders interviewed as to their New Year's eve celebration, nearly two-thirds saw 1937 pass into 1938 in their own homes or those of friends. Many of them were abed before midnight.

A dozen took in the opera, theatrical performances or the Northwestern-Notre Dame basketball game. Ten were out of town, the majority on holiday jaunts to Miami. A few were at parties in clubs. A handful [all ministers] were in church. A banker was at his desk. Only four were out touring the scenes of commercialized gayety.

What Bankers Did.

A. W. Harris, chairman, and Howard Fenton, president, of the Harris Trust; Gen. Charles G. Dawes, chairman, and Philip R. Clarke, president, of the City National, and James R. Leavell, president of the Continental-Illinois, all were at home with their families. Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Continental-Illinois, went out with friends.

President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern went to bed early, so he could get up early for a New Year breakfast at the home of friends.

P. D. Block, Inland Steel, E. A. Cudahy Jr., packer, and Clifford D. Caldwell, Interlake Iron, visited friends. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., he of Inland Steel also, took their sons to the opera.

What Lawyers Did.

LOOP IS JAMMED BY HAPPY, NOISY ORDERLY THRONG

Hotels and Cafes Report Full Houses.

Hotel dining rooms, restaurants night clubs, and other gathering places in all parts of the city were centers of happy confusion last night and early this morning as scores of thousands of Chicagoans welcomed New Year 1938.

The largest crowds, of course, were found downtown. There was no way of estimating the numbers, but veteran trafic policemen said they could recall no larger New Year's eve crowds. By the thousands, men, women, and children moved like human waves through the streets until, at midnight, they concentrated at the two gayest intersections, State and Randolph streets and State and Madison streets.

Trafic Tied in Knots.

Trafic was effectively blocked in upper State street and parts of Randolph and Madison streets by horn tooting celebrators. Those who sought to escape the crush found it an almost impossible task. Trafic policemen were unable to cope with the jams, and at midnight, during the wildest moments of the revelry, the crowd helplessly pressed against building walls and fronts.

The Liggett drug store window at State and Madison streets was caved in, and William A. Grant, 22 years old, 4353 Monroe street, vas cut on the right foot by glass. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital. Merrymakers took advantage of the break to empty the display window of liquor supplies. Four squads of police were rushed to the scene to untangle the jam.

The hotels downtown enjoyed the greatest scenes of merrymaking and all reported they were filled to capacity. Top prices were $10 this year in contrast to $12.50 last year.

All Around the Hotels.

The Morrison hotel was host to New Year celebrators in its Terrace Casino and other rooms. Top price was $7.50. The night was a good one, W. R. Rutzen, manager, said.

Minks and other valuable apparel were in evidence in the Empire room of the Palmer house, where the fee was $10. More than 500 persons gathered there. The main café, Le Petit café, Red Laquer room, and grand ballroom also were filled.

The Brevoort hotel's Mural room, at $4.50 a seat, and the Gold room, at $3.50, did capacity business and were sold out three days ago, J. Z. Galbough, manager, said.

Sherman Observes Centennial.

The Hotel Sherman, celebrating its centennial as well as the New Year, was host to more than 5,000 in its College Inn, Old Towne room, Bal Tabarin, and Grand ballroom. Tops was $7.50 in the College Inn, where Buddy Rogers, orchestra leader, appeared.

The Bismarck hotel and Hotel La Salle found the night both full to capacity and colorful. About 1,000 celebrated at the Bismarck's Walnut and Flamingo rooms and Bierstube, and as many in the La Salle's Blue Fountain and Grand ballrooms.

The Stevens, Congress, Blackstone, and Auditorium hotels, in the south downtown district, were all filled. The Boulevard room in the Stevens showed an attendance of 500, and the Casino in the Congress accommodated 600. More than 300 crowded the Mayfair room in the Blackstone and a large private party took over the Crystal ballroom. The Auditorium's grand ballroom was gay with 700 celebrators.

North Side, South Side.

On the north side the Drake, Edgewater Beach, and Knickerbocker hotels all reported capacity attendance. The Gold Coast room in the Drake took care of 1,100 guests at $10 each. The Edgewater Beach entertained 700 in its Marine dining room. The Knickerbocker was host to 700 in three ballrooms. The Sovereign hotel and the North Shore hotel, the latter in Evanston, each entertained 200.

On the south side the Windermere East, Shoreland, Del Prado, Sherry, and Chicago Beach hotels were the scenes of festivity. More than 3,000 men and women assembled at some twenty parties.

Night clubs and restaurants all welcomed the new year, with the Chez Paree, with a capacity crowd of 700, probably leading the parade. Top price was $10. Right behind, and all filled to capacity, were the Yacht Club, with 350 guests; the 885 Club, with 200; the Club Alabam', the Club Minuet, the Rose Bowl, Harry's New York Bar, and the Ivanhoe, with crowds from 200 to 400. The story was the same at the Club Royale, Colosimo's, and Royal Frolics, on the south side.

L'Aiglon and Mme. Galli's on the near north side catered to capacity crowds of epicurean celebrators. Henrici's, the Blackhawk, and Old Heidelberg helped to swell the loop's throngs.

Scores of private parties were held in homes, hotel rooms, and clubs, notably among the latter the Saddle and Cycle, Fortnightly, Racquet, Key, and Cliff Dwellers. A special performance of "Martha," was presented at the Civic Opera house, followed by a supper and dance.

Four Bullet Victims.

Four casualties were reported from stray bullets. Frank Larson, 38 years old, 1515 North Dearborn street, was shot in the right ankle at Madison and Dearborn streets by a gun wielding celebrator. The latter carried Larson into his car and drove him to the County hospital, where he let him out and then drove away without revealing his name.

Another victim was Miss Gussie Ord, 24 years old, 1400 Lake Shore drive, a secretary. She was shot in the left arm at Geneva terrace and Deming place, and taken to the Grant hospital. Edward Kosmicki, 32 years old, 1451 Superior street, was wounded in the right instep in front of 1458 Chicago avenue and given aid at the County hospital. In Evanston Robert Sanders, 13 years old, 710 Hinman avenue, was shot in the right arm by Thomas Geelan, 14 years old, 734 Hinman avenue.

John Roosevelt and his fiancee, Miss Anne Lindsay Clark of Boston, leaving hotel in Washington, where they entertained friends yesterday.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Roosevelt had with them to watch the old year out and the new year in the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt; the widow of the President's half brother, Mrs. J. Roosevelt Roosevelt; John Roosevelt, his fiancée, Miss Anne Lindsay Clark of Boston, and her sister, Miss Sallie Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. left this afternoon to spend the week-end with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont. Hall Roosevelt, brother of the President's wife, and his two children, who were here for Christmas, left this morning to return to New York.

John Roosevelt and his fiancée gave a luncheon in a hotel this noon for personal friends who attended the dance given by the younger Roosevelts last night in the White House. The dance lasted until 2:30 a. m. and then the party continued until dawn in a capital night spot.

FEDERAL AGENTS BATTLE 2; SEIZE SOUTH SIDE STILL

Federal revenue agents yesterday confiscated a 1,000 gallon still in a building at the rear of 6949 Stony Island avenue. Two hours later two men arrived at the place and battled the agents. They were subdued and arrested as the owners. They are Clem Dowiat, 30 years old, 36 East 120th place, and Anthony Harvey, 26 years old, 21 West 110th place.

Ralph Herrick, assistant to E. C. Yellowley, district superintendent of the alcohol tax unit, announced that their arrest marked the cleanup of a large alcohol ring. Agents said the still's products were used principally for refilling or "watering" high-priced liquor.

Another detail of revenue agents raided a farm at 3658 West 111th street yesterday and seized 700 gallons of alcohol in the barn. James Jantkowski and his son, James Jr., were arrested.

PARDONS DENIED 54 CONVICTS, TWO OF THEM KILLERS

The Illinois parole board yesterday denied executive clemency to fifty-four convicts, twenty-four of whom were from Cook county. Among those who must remain in prison is Samuel Howard Dorr, former Chicago insurance agent, who is serving a life sentence for the murder here of William J. O'Brien. Dorr was convicted by a jury in 1930 on evidence that he conspired with O'Brien's wife to murder her husband in order to collect insurance.

Another murderer denied freedom was Michael Trotta who was sentenced in 1931 to serve 145 years in Joliet for killing a policeman during an attempted holdup of a bakery cashier. If Trotta serves until he is eligible for parole he will be 73 years old when released. He entered prison at the age of 27.

GEORGE VI. HANDS OUT 6 PEERAGES IN NEW YEAR LIST

But Chief Topic Is Those Who Missed Honors.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 1 [Saturday].—Six peerages head the traditional New Year's list handed out today by King George VI. of England in reward for services to the British crown and empire.

Lord Nuffield, automobile manufacturer, who has given away more than 55 million dollars within two years, heads the list of 208 with a promotion of one step, from baron to viscount. Lord Nuffield was widely mentioned for the honor last year, but was passed up, partly because of the heavy list caused by the change in kings.

Music Hall Star Honored.

Gracie Fields, music hall star who challenges Mae West's claim to being the highest paid woman on the stage, received the rank of commander of the Order of the British Empire, as did Harriet Cohen, pianist.

Miss Charlotte Josephine King, a clerk of the British consulate general at Chicago, was made a member of the Order of the British Empire.

Three privy councilors, five baronets, and thirty-five knights were created in addition to the knights on the dominion lists.

As usual, the chief topic of conversation isn't who got the honors, but who didn't. And, as usual, all predictions missed. One reason is that an honor is canceled if it is revealed in advance.

No members of the royal family are on this year's list, although the queen and six others were honored last year at the start of the new reign.

The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of 70,000,000 Mohammedans of the Ismaili sect and president of the league of nations assembly, heads the list of the "sure things" that fell through this time.

Because of his unique service to the British in helping to keep peace among the Mohammedan millions of the empire he was expected to get the rare honor of being the second Indian ever to become a peer.

Another tip that did not come off was a new member for the Order of Merit. This ultraexclusive order, with a limit of twenty-four members, now has only fourteen, and it was considered certain somebody would get in.

Churchill Also Omitted.

Winston Churchill, noted writer and former chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord Baldwin, former prime minister, each had backers who insisted he couldn't miss. But they both did.

Five barons, the lowest rank in peerage, were created, as follows:

Sir Leonard Brassey, member of parliament, for political and public services.

Sir Henry [Yarde Buller] Lopes, chairman of the Devon county council, for public services.

Sir Percival Perry, for political and public services.

Parliamentary by-elections will be necessary to replace Sir Leonard and Sir John because peers who become members of the house of lords cannot be members of commons.

The privy councilors named were Sir John Anderson, former governor of Bengal; Robert Hudson, member of parliament and parliamentary secretary for the department of overseas trade, and Brig. Gen. the Earl of Lucan [George Charles Bingham], captain of the honorary corps of gentlemen at arms.

Sir Robert Vansittart, permanent head of the foreign office, got a new decoration—the Grand Cross of the Bath—and Sir Thomas Barnes, the king's proctor, was named Knight of the Bath.

Everard Trentham, financial adviser to the British embassy at Washington, got the Cross of St. Michael and St. George, and Lord Horder, the royal physician, was given the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order, which always is awarded for personal services to the royal family.

The rank and precedent of a knight's wife was conferred upon the widow of Col. Murray Bourchier, agent here for the state of Victoria, Australia. He was on the list, but died Dec. 16.

Dictator Rule Hit in Talk by Gen. Smuts

GENEVA, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Dictators in general were assailed tonight by Gen. Jan Christian Smuts in a New Year's world broadcast from the league of nations in which he said the league is "still a formidable army, able to do battle against militarism and reaction."

Gen. Smuts, who helped President Woodrow Wilson draft the league covenant, warned against war dangers in Europe and the Far East.

SOVIET RUSSIA FEARFUL AS YEAR OF PURGES ENDS

BULLETIN.

MOSCOW, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Three persons were sentenced to death on charges of wrecking in collective farming enterprises, it was reported tonight from White Russia.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Dec. 31.—Soviet Russia tonight celebrated the close of another year of Josef Stalin's dictatorship—a year marked by 4,200 executions, including those of statesmen, soldiers, and scientists; also hundreds of purges which resulted in the arrest and exile of more than 8,000 state officials. There were New Year's trees for children, sports carnivals for youths, and massmeetings throughout the country. Communist party speakers at these gatherings told their listeners that 1938 would be still more joyous and happy for the inhabitants of soviet Russia than 1937.

In the many broadcast speeches, the chief theme was the allegation that, with its new soviet constitution and parliament, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics now is joined solidly with the United States, France, and Great Britain, and that these four nations are opposing the spread of the power of Fascist dictatorships.

Discard An Old Term.

The phrase "dictatorship of the proletariat" suddenly has been dropped in Russia. It has been supplanted by the phrase "proletarian democracy," which V. M. Molotov, president of the council of people's commissars, said was discovered by Stalin.

A report from a Baltic diplomat stationed at Moscow indicated the New Year finds the soviet capital afraid to face the future. Soviet officials openly are panic stricken, fearing further purges by the GPU [secret police]. The population is apprehensive of the moment when Stalin will be assassinated by one of his own commissars as a measure of self defense, this report said.

Reports Desire for Freedom.

The diplomat said Russia is threatened with disintegration. The wholesale executions of leaders in the Ukrainian, White Russian, Armenian and Caucasian republics, on charges of separatist tendencies, have intensified the desire of the nationalities living in those areas for complete independence from the Moscow régime, he indicated.

Despite the unlimited power wielded by the GPU, he said, Moscow's power is weaker than it was a year ago.

[Soviet Russia yesterday created a new commissariat of naval affairs, Moscow dispatches said. The move "will strengthen the defense capacity of soviet Russia," the Pravda, communist newspaper, asserted.]

Winchester, Va., Jan. 1 [Saturday].—(AP)—Virginia's first reported 1938 baby had as its attending physician Dr. L. M. Allen, who also ushered Wallis Warfield, now the duchess of Windsor, into the world.

The child, a boy and one of twins, was born at 12:01 a. m. at Memorial hospital to Mrs. Garland Carter of Winchester. The other baby is a girl.

GAY ESTONIANS CELEBRATE END OF DICTATORSHIP

Carnival Throngs Hail New Constitution.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TALLIN, Estonia, Dec. 31.—Torchlight processions and ice carnivals were held in Tallin and other Estonian towns tonight, marking a national celebration to welcome the new constitution which becomes effective at midnight. Konstantin Piats, who with Gen. Johann Laidoner governed Estonia since March, 1924, when Piats suspended the activities of political parties, becomes Estonia's first president.

Until now the head of the state has been known as the Riigiwanem [the state's oldest]. Estonia's return to a representative form of government after almost four years of dictatorship is the occasion of national celebrations in cities and towns.

Proclaim End of Dictatorship.

The Estonian press proudly reports that Estonia's brief period of dictatorship is ending without the loss of a single life, and it predicts that the remaining hundred leaders of the War Veterans' association, serving sentences for plotting a putsch to establish a Fascist government, will be granted amnesty following the session of the new parliament to be elected in March.

The chief change in the government is the abandonment of proportional representation [the French parliamentary system], which has failed conspicuously as a form of government when adopted by the new nations of Europe.

President Addresses Nation.

Although it has been customary among members of the Baltic entente to send delegates to each others national celebrations, neither Latvia nor Lithuania sent delegations to Tallin to participate in the ceremonies inaugurating the new constitution. Both still are governed by dictatorships.

LONDON GREETS NEW YEAR WITH LUSTY WELCOME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 1.—London gave a lusty welcome to 1938. Crowds swarmed the streets, jamming trafic in the main centers of the city.

The scenes in fashionable west end were a slightly milder version of those of coronation night. Long before midnight every inch around the statue of Eros in Piccadilly Circus was filled with festive crowds.

Thousands of revelers milled about St. Paul's cathedral, traditional mecca for London's Scots on New Year's eve. At the stroke of midnight there came a torrent of yelling, cheering, and singing.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS ADD TRAGIC NOTE TO END OF 1937

Many Are Arrested After New Year's Eve Crashes

Undaunted by a trafic massacre that took a staggering toll of life in the city and nation during 1937, Chicago celebrators took the wheel last night and ushered out the old year in a manner prophetic of an even more tragic 1938.

Arrests for drunken and reckless driving began early in the evening. Police of several districts were seeking hit and run autoists who left crushed and battered victims behind them. Among these were a woman struck down on her way to evening services, and a watchman who was run over by the motorist he attempted to warn away from a dangerous place in the street.

In contrast to the wild driving in Chicago, the suburbs observed the evening quietly and sanely.

Hit as He Waves Lantern.

Struck down as he waved a red lantern to warn motorists of a street excavation at 79th and State streets, Chris Pavela, 64 years old, was in a critical condition at the Doctors' hospital last night. Pavela, who lives at 2921 Princeton avenue and is a watchman for the surface lines, incurred a possible skull fracture. The car sped on before its number could be taken.

On her way to devotions at Our Lady of Sorrows church, Miss Anna Breen, 54 years old, 1740 North Mason avenue, was struck and critically injured by a car in front of 3125 Van Buren street. Her skull was fractured. The car sped on.

Miss Bridget Donaghue, 50 years old, 3863 Flournoy street, was injured at Jackson boulevard and Karlov avenue, when struck by a car driven by Alfred King, 61 years old, of 707 North Kenneth avenue. He was arrested by the Fillmore street police for reckless driving.

Arrested After Chase.

Joseph Dizillo, 30 years old, 1219 North Western avenue, was arrested after a chase by a police squad who fired four shots at him, and was charged with reckless driving. The chase began when Dizillo's car narrowly missed a woman and three children in Chicago avenue. He was caught at Ogden boulevard and Carpenter street.

Bystanders captured Thedore C. Williams, 35 years old, 3037 Washington boulevard, after his car struck a parked machine in front of 3830 North Clark street. In the parked car was Lawrence Golden, 21 years old, 4817 North Troy street. Williams drove on half a block, abandoned his car and tried to escape on foot but was caught and held. Police charged him with drunken driving.

After his auto had struck two parked cars in the 5700 block on North Normal parkway, Curley Washington, colored, 29 years old, 4835 Calumet avenue, was seized by Park Policeman Timothy Ryan and was charged with driving while drunk and reckless driving.

Hits Two Parked Machines.

Driving his car out of Damen avenue into Ridge avenue, Arthur E. Mosley, 24 years old, 1457 Rosemont avenue, struck two parked machines. Mosley was arrested and charged with reckless driving.

Shakespeare avenue police last night seized Carroll Engh, 21 years old, 330 South Ashland avenue, an electrical school student, on a charge of reckless driving after his car struck another driven by Theodore Mellenthin, 43 years old, 1824 North Oakdale avenue, at Ashland avenue and Cortland street. Mellenthin's wife, Eleanora, was injured slightly.

A crash at Oakley and Fullerton avenues resulted in the arrest for drunken driving of Joseph Salerno, 29 years old, 4425 School street. Salerno's car struck one driven by Louis Heile, 66 years old, 2743 Pine Grove avenue. Mrs. Helen Ottinger, 46 years old, 2552 North Oakley avenue, who was riding with Heile, was taken to St. Mary's hospital.

Held as Reckless Drivers.

Andrew Kaznieki, 26 years old, 5118 South Lockwood avenue, was charged with reckless driving by New City police late last night after he ran his car into two other machines at 45th street and Fairfield avenue.

Police seized Walter Smolinski, 36 years old, 4333 North Marmora avenue, after his car struck that of Ralph Wakefield, 50 years old, 3809 North Keeler avenue, at Grace street and Keeler avenue. Wakefield was slightly hurt. Smolinski was charged with reckless driving.

Another driver charged with reckless driving was Herman Swanson, 42 years old, 3539 Elston avenue. He lost control of his car at Artesian and Arthur avenues. His companion, Miss Albertina Vonberhiede, 41 years old, 1739 Addison street, suffered lacerations.

Hunt Drunken Driver.

A drunken hit and run driver was sought in Wilmette after his car seriously injured John Henske, 46 years old, 1835 Huron street, who was wheeling coal from the street into a home at 350 Greenleaf avenue in the suburb.

Struck by a car in 87th street at Lowe avenue, Richard Meredith, 33 years old, 8743 South Union avenue, was fatally injured. He died in Doctors' hospital. The driver, W. S. Heinze, 8420 Kerfoot avenue, was released by police after witnesses had been questioned.

An unidentified man about 65 years old was killed when a car ran him down at La Salle and Locust streets. Witnesses said he was watching other trafic an walked into the path of a machine driven by Robert Huse, 27 years old, 4921 North Hermitage avenue. He died at Henrotin hospital. Huse was released by the Chicago avenue police.

Louis Patterson, 50 years old, 3350 South Wabash avenue, a tavern manager, died early today in the Evangelical hospital of injuries suffered two days ago in a collision at Peoria street and Garfield boulevard.

An unidentified pedestrian, between 35 and 40 years of age, was killed a few minutes after midnight when he was run down by an automobile in Joliet road, Lyons. The driver, Kurt Brosig, 35 years old, 4301 Lawndale avenue, Lyons, was not held.

An unidentified man, about 45 years old, was killed by a car that sped away in front of 2350 South Leavitt street at 12:30 o'clock this morning.

Killed When Train Hits Car.

A man believed to be Ben C. Vanderwyst, 27 years old, of 102 North Crook street, Barrington, was killed, and his wife, Rose, about the same age, was seriously hurt, at 3 o'clock this morning when their automobile was struck by a Chicago bound Illinois Central passenger train at Route 59, six miles southeast of Elgin.

The car burst into flames after the crash. The train crew dragged the couple from the burning wreckage, but the man was dead, and the woman unconscious. She was taken to the St. Joseph hospital, Elgin. Cards indicated the victim's identity.

Hurrying across Western avenue at North avenue, Paul Kowalski, 50 years old, 2552 Thomas street, was struck and fatally injured by a car driven by Albert Rohr, 725 North St. Louis avenue. Police said poor visibility apparently caused the accident.

The Rev. Thomas J. Kelly, 32 years old, assistant pastor of St. Bernard Catholic church, was injured yesterday, when his car skidded on Michigan avenue at Ohio street and crashed into a safety island. He said the fog had hampered his driving.

With foggy weather contributing to several automobile accidents during the day, the year drew to a close with 1,111 fatalities recorded in Cook county up to 4 p. m. In Chicago alone since Jan. 1, 1937, there were 853 trafic deaths and 22,842 persons injured.

Quis in Murder Cruise

Jack Morgan, who was killed on yacht and body thrown into sea.

Robert Horne, who is said to have struck Morgan with marlin spike after Morgan shot and killed Dwight L. Faulding.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

SURVIVORS TELL OF EX-CONVICT'S REIGN ON YACHT

ding's body lay at the bottom of the hatchway. Finally, in response to pleas of Mrs. Morgan, he ordered Horne and Spernack to bring it on deck and fasten it in a piece of carpet torn from the cabin floor.

When the schooner was opposite the lights of San Clemente, Morgan made the others fasten an anchor to the body and fling it into the sea.

"Morgan seemed to be crazy," said Miss Berdan. "He ordered us around at the point of his gun. He beat the men and swore at them constantly, and he treated his own wife inhumanly. He seemed to have no conscience or compassion.

"He made improper advances to me. When I tried to fight him off he hit me on my head with something and knocked me almost unconscious.

"For five days we lived in the shadow of death. We knew Morgan would not hesitate to kill us—having already killed a man to get control of the ship.

Wife Forced to Act as Aid.

"When he wanted to sleep he made his wife hold his gun, threatening to kill her, too, if she did not obey him. Mrs. Morgan was in terrible fear of him and did as she was told."

A storm came up and Morgan ordered all the hatches closed and the schooner's auxiliary motor started. He made the terror ridden group huddle with him in the cockpit of the pitching vessel.

Hours later, when the ocean again calmed, the hatches were opened and several passengers went below. Little Robert Turner, who had been ignored during the shooting and the storm, lay sprawled in his bunk, unconscious from escaping motor fumes.

For two hours his frantic mother and all the others except Morgan worked over him in an effort to resuscitate him. They were finally successful.

During the ensuing days, the two days' rations ran low and were meted out, a little at a time, to all except Morgan. He ate his fill.

Morgan Finally Subdued.

It was on Christmas day that the passengers found their opportunity to overcome Morgan.

"Get out that log line. I've got to see what we're doing in the way of speed," Morgan ordered Horne.

The youth complied, but he purposely fouled the line on the ship's rail while he played for time and a chance to get closer to Morgan. Slowly he pulled in the rope while he inched closer to a narlin spike lying just back of the pilot.

Suddenly he lunged for the spike, seized it, and brought it down on Morgan's head. Then, gripped by fea. that Morgan might regain consciousness, Horne and Spernack heaved his body overboard.

S O S Signal Brings Aid.

They turned the ship toward home and painted an S O S on a sail. A navy flyer saw the distress signal and sent help to them. The six haggard survivors were picked up on Wednesday by a coast guard cutter which found them without food or water as the derelict schooner wallowed helplessly in storm tossed seas 190 miles south of here, off the Mexican coast.

Formal murder charges have been filed against Horne and Spernack, but authorities unofficially admitted this is only a legal formality and indicated their belief the two should not be prosecuted. Mrs. Morgan is held under $2,500 bond as a material witness in the case.

NEW AID TO EDEN NAMED; FOREIGN STAF SHAKEN UP

Vansittart Becomes Chief Diplomatic Adviser.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who has been keeping a tight grip on Great Britain's foreign policy, signalized the new year tonight with a shakeup of the personnel of the London foreign office.

It was officially announced that Sir Robert Vansittart, for eight years permanent undersecretary in the foreign office, has been appointed to a specially created post of chief diplomatic adviser to the British government. Apparently he will relieve Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, of many of the jobs now carried out by Eden.

Sir Robert's place as permanent undersecretary will be taken by Sir Alexander Cadogan, his present deputy.

Chamberlain to Take Charge.

The new lineup of Great Britain's diplomatic team followed a disclosure last night that the prime minister personally will take charge of the foreign office when Capt. Eden goes to the south of France for a vacation next week. Hitherto Viscount Halifax acted for the foreign secretary during Eden's absence.

Sir Robert's new post, according to tonight's communique, was created by the prime minister because of complications in diplomacy arising mainly from the Spanish war and the far eastern crisis, and because of the strain these conditions have placed on foreign office chiefs.

Sir Robert's post will carry a yearly salary of $15,000. He will join the chief industrial adviser, Sir Horace Wilson, and Frederick Leith Ross, chief economic adviser, as a kind of "thinking department" for the cabinet.

Responsible to Eden.

Sir Robert will be directly responsible to Capt. Eden in the new job. He will advise on all major questions of foreign policy and will replace the foreign secretary to some extent, it is said, in carrying out missions abroad for the British government. His main task will be to coordinate British foreign policy and insure there is no overlapping. He also will sit on the committees concerned with foreign policy.

The appointment of Sir Alexander as permanent undersecretary of the foreign office puts a comparatively young man at the head of the department. He is 53 years old—three years younger than Sir Robert. Sir Alexander was formerly British ambassador to China and has a specialized knowledge of the far eastern situation.

Sir Robert, who has had a distinguished career in British diplomatic posts throughout the world, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Sir Ronald Lindsay as British ambassador to Washington.

CONFESSES JULY 4, 1932, KILLING.

Fox Captured

The captured fox after it had been taken to the dog pound.

Dogcatcher John Burns stopped his truck at 64th place and Central avenue yesterday as he sighted one more animal for his load. "Here, doggie," said he. Policeman John Crum came along and offered to help. Together they cornered the beast and, after Crum's coat had been torn, captured him. "That pooch," said the policeman, "is a silver fox." And it was, but he was taken to the city dog pound just the same.

DODGE HEIRESS BREAKS TROTH TO JACK DOYLE

Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 31.—[Special.] — Delphine Dodge Cromwell Baker Godde, heiress to automobile millions, who recently announced her engagement to Jack Doyle, crooning Irish pugilist, has changed her mind, her family announced today. Instead she will take a second honeymoon with her third husband, Timothy Godde.

She will go to Cuba to try to forget the dizzy moments while she and Doyle were hitting the high spots in Nevada and California—and the $2,000,000 alienation of affections suit filed against her by Screen Actress Judith Allen, estranged and partly divorced wife of Doyle.

CHEMICAL BLAST BLOWS OFF HAND OF CELEBRATOR

An explosion and fire broke up a New Year's eve party early today at 3635 North Kedvale avenue, and cost the left hand of one of the guests, John Dolan, 22 years old, 4126 Cornelia avenue. The host was Dalidor Bubenicek. Bubenicek is an amateur chemist, and keeps a small laboratory in his basement. At 2:30 a. m., Dolan and two other guests went into the basement, and Dolan mixed some chemicals.

The result was a sharp explosion that mangled Dolan's hand, and started a fire in the basement. Dolan was taken to the Belmont hospital where the hand was amputated. Firemen under Chief William MacKenzie, of the 22d battalion, extinguished the blaze which did $300 damage.

HITLER MAKES A NEW YEAR VOW: GREATER ARMS

Message to Nation Calls for More Power.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—"Expansion of German fighting forces is a political necessity," Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler said tonight in his New Year's proclamation to the German people.

Giving his slogan for the coming year as "strengthening of the nation in all branches of its life," Hitler explained that this means "internally strengthening and steeling of Nazi education."

"Economically," the Fuehrer said, "it means a more energetic carrying through of the four year plan for economic independence. In the foreign field, politically, it means the expansion of forces—since we believe that in these disturbed times only a powerful state can maintain for our people their most precious possession—namely, peace."

Repeats Colony Demand.

Germany believes the far eastern troubles may make England more amenable in regard to the German demand for colonies, and Hitler indicated that this question will be kept to the fore when he remarked:

"May the rest of the world at last recognize that the rearrival of Germany was due entirely to the internal achievement of our people and without any attack on others, and may the world also contribute to a peaceful solution of that question, whose factual and moral basis is established on reason and common right."

Pointing to the German-Italian-Japanese pact against communism, and at the same time slashing at the Jews, Hitler proclaimed that "this new German world power," through its coöperation with strong friends, has "helped to create an international element of assured order against the dark forces which have been described as the yeast of decomposition of nations."

In another New Year's address Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister for propaganda, said:

"There is nobody in the world who could now dare attack us. Today we are in the happy position of being able to pursue a policy serving German interests."

Forecasts End of League.

Goebbels forecast the end of the league of nations when he said: "Versailles [the treaty of Versailles drawn at the end of the world war] is dead. The Geneva institute evolved from it will suffer the same fate."

Contrasting Germany's "happy position" with the disturbed state of other countries the German press, in New Year's articles, patted itself on the back. The Berliner Tageblatt stressed the growth of unemployment in the United States. The Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung said Germany had succeeded in isolating soviet Russia. The Boersen Zeitung, mouthpiece of the German fighting forces, said: "There has been a decline of soviet influence and prestige in the diplomatic field."

JAPAN SETS 1938 GOAL AS BETTER RELATIONS WITH UNITED STATES

TOKIO, Jan. 1 [Saturday].—(AP)—Maintenance of friendly relations between the United States and Japan was set forth as a cardinal policy for 1938 by the Japanese cabinet today in its annual New Year's greetings to the empire.

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoe said Japan's actions today had a world-wide effect, directly influencing the world for peace or war. Japan, he said, while trying to march ahead as peacefully as possible, would offer strong resistance to nations believing in the existing status.

Communications Minister Ryutaro Nagai said he considered the Japanese mus "work for redistribution of the natural resources of the world, thereby preventing the majority of the world's population from falling into the depths of despair."

COURT UPHOLDS GARMENT CO. IN FIGHT ON C.I.O.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The Donnelly Garment company was upheld in federal court today in its contention that its employés are satisfied with working conditions, have their own legal union and cannot, therefore, be picketed by a C. I. O. group seeking to organize them.

A two-to-one decision granted an injunction against picketing and interference by the International Ladies' Garment Workers union which set aside $100,000 at its last convention for a Donnelly organizing campaign.

158 AMERICANS TRAPPED BY JAP BOMBS IN CHINA

Railway Cut Near Canton; Refugee Train Halted.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONGKONG, Dec. 31.—Japan's air forces, continuing their campaign of death and destruction against the far south of China, severed communication with the interior today by a successful bombing of the Canton-Hankow railway. Tracks were demolished just north of Canton, delaying for an indeterminate time the arrival of a train carrying refugees from Hankow.

[An announcement by the state department at Washington indicated there were 158 American men, women, and children aboard the train from Hankow and Changsha, China, which was halted by the Japanese air raid on the Hankow-Canton railway. All were being evacuated from the rapidly widening war zone in the interior.]

British Shipments Cut Off.

This newest raid, coming on the heels of yesterday's destructive air raid on Canton, in which 35 persons were killed and 70 wounded and twenty buildings destroyed, indirectly affects British interests. It cuts off shipments of British goods to the Chinese interior through the British colony of Hongkong, southeast of Canton. Hongkong and Canton are connected by a railway, which continues from Canton to Hankow and other cities in the interior.

The Japanese are carrying out their bombing operations from airplane carriers stationed at an island base a few miles south of the Portuguese Island of Macao, not far from Hongkong. For several weeks the Japanese have had two or three airplane carriers at this location and have made repeated attempts to sever the railway to Hongkong.

Until today their efforts had been ineffective. Rail officials, however, considering the damage from today's operations, ruefully admitted that the aim of the Japanese airmen is improving.

Sees No Jap Mobilization.

I arrived here today by ship from Shanghai. On the voyage down the eastern coast I saw no evidence of heavy Japanese troop movements toward this area, which heretofore has been untouched by the undeclared war except for extensive Japanese air raids on Chinese cities. Such troop movements have been reported from time to time. Last week it was reported that Japanese troops had been landed on the mainland in Bias bay, east of Hongkong.

The consensus among neutral naval and civilian authorities here is that there has been no Japanese mobilization in the southern area. They maintain that the sinking of the American gunboat Panay, the attack on the British gunboat Ladybird, and other Japanese actions which aroused the western nations to the point where relations with Japan were endangered, have exhausted the latitude of plausible explanations for Japanese violation of international neutrality.

U. S. Officials on Alert.

Major Japanese activity in this southern area, they point out, inevitably would result in further complications. American and British officials here are on the alert and war vessels and aircraft are much in evidence.

Contrary to the atmosphere at Shanghai, which is torn by desolation and sorrow as a result of the months of warfare there, Hongkong is permeated with a holiday spirit. The city is crowded with American, British, and other foreign refugees from interior cities, and hotel accommodations are exhausted.

In other areas of China it was far from a happy New Year's eve. In Shantung province the Japanese army marched on toward the great port of Tsingtao, while the Chinese completed their work of destruction of Japanese properties.

When the Japanese reach Tsingtao, dispatches from the north indicated, they will meet no resistance, but will find hundreds of million of dollars' worth of Japanese properties—mills, factories, and homes—destroyed.

Fires Still Burn.

Fires still burned here and there in the port, but the last of the Chinese troops who had been applying the torch and dynamite evacuated the city last night. So did the mayor, Admiral Shen Hung-lieh, and his marines, leaving the city at the mercy of looters. The Chinese police force, it was indicated, had disintegrated.

Foreign residents, including about 200 Americans, united with Chinese civilians in attempting to maintain order until the Japanese military arrived. Two United States warships still were standing by in the harbor, ready to evacuate the Americans, if necessary.

In another sector of Shantung, a Japanese column marched steadily southward along the Tientsin-Pukow railway, meeting little resistance. Pukow is across the river from Nanking, the former Chinese capital, which the Japanese occupied some days ago.

Dispatches from the north indicated that the Japanese strategy was to seize or make useless all of China's railways. Already the Japanese hold about 2,750 miles of the 6,000 mile Chinese railway system. Only two major lines are still in Chinese hands—the Lunghai railway, which runs from east to west in the north of China, and the Canton-Hankow line in the south, which the Japanese severed today.

AMERICANS LISTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—The names of 158 American men, women, and children, evacuated yesterday from Hankow and Changsha, China, and en route on a special train to Hongkong, were made public tonight by the state department. All are believed to be aboard the train, which, according to a dispatch from THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent in Hongkong, was delayed by the bombing of the Hankow-Canton railway by Japanese airmen. Among the 20 men, 60 women, and 78 children listed were the following:

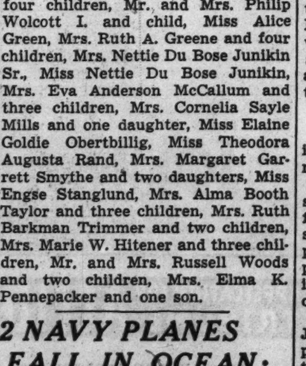
Bombs Trap Refugees

(Story in Adjoining Column.)



When Japanese planes yesterday bombed Canton-Hankow railway tracks north of Canton (indicated by arrow), a train from Hankow carrying refugees, including 158 Americans, was delayed. The raid cut off shipment of British goods to the Chinese interior through British colony of Hongkong. Japanese are carrying out bombing operations from base south of Islands of Macao.

2 NAVY PLANES FALL IN OCEAN; 11 ESCAPE DEATH

A big amphibian ship, carrying nine men, slithered along the surface of the water, somersaulted, and sank. The men scrambled through the doors of the plane and were picked up by a crash boat.

Eighteen miles at sea a navy warplane, flown by Lieut. G. F. Rice, pilot, and J. F. Maloof, radioman, in search of a derelict sailboat, caught fire and plunged into the ocean.

Lieut. Rice and Maloof freed themselves from the wreckage and were picked up by Tom Reed, Hollywood scenario writer, cruising near by in his yacht Paisano. He returned them to the battleship Tennessee.

BRITISH DEMAND JAPANESE PROVE GOOD INTENTIONS

Want Facts on Steps to Halt Attacks.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Great Britain today followed up the recent warning of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that it would take more than apologies and promises to smooth over the bombings of British ships on the Yangtze.

A note delivered to Japan today by Sir Robert Craigie, British ambassador to Tokio, revealed here tonight, demanded further conversations "in the course of which they [the British] do not doubt that they will be informed of actual steps decided upon."

[Japan Tuesday submitted to Great Britain an apology for a machine gun attack on the H. M. S. Ladybird and British merchant ships near Nanking on Dec. 12. Like the Panay note to the United States, Japan indicated that those responsible for the incident would be punished and that such an incident would not recur. No definite measures were outlined, however.]

British Reply Is Firm.

The British reply was couched in the usual ceremonious diplomatic form, but it was decidedly firm.

It declared that the government "noted with appreciation" assurances in the Japanese note published yesterday that the attacks would not be repeated, and that the government "have learned with satisfaction that statements contained in your note of Dec. 14 [a preliminary apology in which Japan promised there would be no more attacks on British warships] apply to merchant vessels concerned as well as warships." The latter assurance was asked by Great Britain in reply to the first Japanese note.

More Assurance Demanded.

But, in diplomatic form, the British contradicted the Japanese explanations of the mistake.

"The government is bound to observe," the note said, "that their information in regard to the circumstances in which the attacks took place, notably, for instance, on the point of visibility [the Japanese said it was foggy] is at variance with that of the Japanese government."

In general, the British accepted the Japanese apologies and promises to prevent repitition, but want to see that they are carried out.

Halt Plot to Assassinate Spanish Moroccan Khalifa

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 31.—The insurgent broadcasting station at Salamanca, Spain, announced today an attempt to assassinate the Moorish khalifa and the Spanish high commissioner of Spanish Morocco and members of their personal staffs. The plot was discovered when suspicious parcels addressed to them from Rabat, French Morocco, were opened, it was said. Postal officials found in them bombs with time fuses. The khalifa represents the Moroccan sultan in Spanish Morocco.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Reports that Japanese peace overtures were being conveyed to the Chinese government through German channels gained ground in foreign official circles today.

The reports were that Oskar Trautmann, Germany's ambassador to China, would present the proposals to the Chinese government. The German ambassador to Tokio was said to have received them from the Japanese government for dispatch to Trautmann.

FORMER QUEEN ASKS INCREASE IN PENSION PAID HER BY FRANCE

PARIS, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The former Queen Salima Machimba of the Indian ocean island of Mohilla has sent letters to all the monarchs of Europe asking them to persuade the French government to increase her pension.

The 63 year old former queen addressed each ruler as "dear colleague." She abdicated thirty-seven years ago to marry Camile Paule, a French gendarme, with whom she lives on a small farm in Burgundy.

France, "protector" of the island kingdom, gave her a 10,000 franc [$349] annual pension. She maintains that increased living costs now make it impossible for her to live in the style to which she has become accustomed.

NEW RUMANIAN PREMIER ORDERS DRIVE ON JEWS

Thousands Face Ouster from Country.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Octavian Goga, Rumania's new "strong man," said tonight he would "expel all Jewish elements which entered the country illegally after the [world] war."

In a broadcast to the country, the anti-semitic premier announced a series of rigorous measures against the Jews which gave tangible cause for and made acute the apprehension already felt by Rumania's Jewish population of 1,200,000.

Already many of the vast numbers of Jews who have entered Rumania since the war were disposing of their properties and preparing to leave the country. Some of the measures resembled those of Adolf Hitler in Germany.

Outlines His Policy.

Goga said he had suspended three newspapers "hostile to the new state"; had prohibited Jews from selling liquor, and had withdrawn passes of 120 Jewish journalists. He outlined his anti-semitic national christian party's policy as follows:

1. The resurrection of Rumania through the christian church.
2. Loyalty to the monarchy.
3. Adherence to the idea that in Rumania the rights of Rumanians are superior to the privileges of others.

The new premier solicited for his party, which holds a small minority in parliament, the support of the national peasant party.

Blueshirts Patrol Bucharest.

"I have ordered examinations into the citizenship of Jews who invaded our country illegally by the tens of thousands after the war and who since have exploited our country," he said. "They will be expelled."

Blue-shirted "lancers" [Rumanian fascists] patroled Bucharest today, and Jews of the city faced the new year with apprehension. Many had sought haven here from post-war persecutions in Russia, Poland, and Germany, and little, if any, welcome could be expected from the nations bordering Rumania.

King Carol, in a broadcast address at midnight, conveyed New Year's greetings to his subjects and summoned the nation to support the crown.

CHICAGO MASS TO HONOR SLAIN CHINESE MONDAY

Cardinal Mundelein announced last night that a solemn pontifical mass will be offered in honor of Joseph Lo Pa-hong, slain Chinese, in Holy Name cathedral Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Lo was head of the recently formed Shanghai Civic association, regarded as pro-Japanese. He was slain Thursday in Shanghai by a Chinese patriot-terrorist, according to news dispatches.

The mass will be celebrated by Bishop Yu Pin of Nanking, who is touring the country in the interest of war charities of the Catholic church in China. All religious orders in the city with missions in China are to be represented at the mass.

A knight of St. Gregory and possessor of other Vatican honors, Lo was in Chicago in 1926 for the International Eucharistic congress, of which he was a permanent committee member.

CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

U. S. SCIENTISTS STRIVE TO HELP MORE SOCIALLY

Seek Ways to Make Use of New Knowledge.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—While science proceeds on its quest of the unknown, moving nearer every year to an understanding of the nature and action of matter, finding basic natural activity about as substantial as emotions, discovering a new gas in the earth's upper atmosphere, finding oceans of hot ice on Jupiter, and promising amelioration of many human ills, the outstanding note of the sessions of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, closing tomorrow has been for the scientists of America to become more socially responsive and active.

Study Art of Living.

It is not so much a demand that the scientists enter the political field, as that has been tried with a good deal of resulting confusion, as it is for the application of the scientific method to the pressing problems of the day. Back of this is the necessity for a wider education and appreciation of these methods. Their application would come through the art of management and administration, the art of medicine, the very art of living.

This appeal has run all through the science and society symposium which the association introduced for the first time in its history and which closed today with an analysis of science in business by H. S. Person, New York industrial engineer. He was not present but his paper was given to the association.

The measure of the scientific method in business, he said, is determined by the attitude of mind, the disposition to use all the knowledge and technique that is pertinent to a particular dynamic environment.

Achievements Recalled.

There have been notable achievements in industrial capitalism, the creation of new compounds, the redesign of the old, the realization of mass production. But the speaker pointed out that society is yet far from a realization of the higher standard of living potential in the scientific technique that is available.

"There is danger in the conflict of ungoverned destructive forces," Mr. Person said. "That way lies Fascism, Naziism, Stalinism, or other types of undemocratic stabilization. The democratic way is deliberately to bring the resources of science to the solution of problems."

The methods of science, he said, must be applied to the entire financial enterprise so that it will become controled and directed in the social interest. This means the application of science to the solution of the collective problem.

For Individual Enterprise.

"But it need not mean," he concluded, "elimination of individual enterprise and individual profit rewards on the lower planes. Strategic collective controls in the area of financial capitalism will permit continuance of a large freedom for individual action in the area of industrial capitalism."

One of the papers that has attracted great interest among the physicists and astronomers is that by Drs. Arthur Adel and C. O. Lampland, of Lowell observatory, in which they announce the discovery of a new constituent of the earth's upper atmosphere, called nitrogen pentoxide. The location of this new constituent is probably coincident, it is reported, with the ozone layer which extends from about ten miles to twenty-five miles above the earth's surface.

Another event that has excited the physicists is the report from Washington university, St. Louis, of pictures taken on Christmas eve which tend to prove the existence of a wide range of heavyweight electrons, about 1,800 different varieties, the existence of which would require the modification of some of the fundamental present day concepts of the constitution of matter. Opinion is reserved as to the existence of this electrical jungle, and Washington university claims are challenged by a group from the University of Michigan.

Mexican Chamber Votes Country's Largest Budget

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 31. — (AP) — (AP)—A 1938 budget totaling 430,000,000 pesos [$119,500,000], the largest in Mexico's history, was approved by the chamber of deputies early today. The figure was 12,000,000 pesos [$3,333,000] more than proposed by President Cardenas in his budget message and was approximately equal to his estimate of revenues for next year.

Annulment Sought

Mrs. Dorothy Fay Barker Foster (left), who seeks to annul gin marriage, in court with her sister, Mrs. Lawrence Rogers.

Mrs. Dorothy Fay Barker Foster, 18 years old, was in a fog of alcohol fumes at the time of her Gretna Green wedding at Harrison, N. Y., last July 8 and remembers nothing of it, she testified yesterday. Mrs. Foster is seeking annulment of her marriage to Joseph Taylor Foster Jr., 25 years old, of Greenwich, Conn.

Mrs. Foster, who lives at 39 East Division street, added that she had known Foster only four days. Judge John J. Lupe instructed attorneys to present briefs so that he can determine if Illinois and New York annulment laws are in agreement. Mrs. Foster and her sister Mrs. Lawrence Rogers recently moved here from New York.

3 YOUNG GUNMEN HELD IN THEATER MURDER INQUIRY

CRIMINAL COURT.

Clarence Williams, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary; Herman Buxbaum, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary; William Morrissey, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Joseph A. Sabath.

Three young gunmen were held last night by Shakespeare avenue police as suspects in the murder of Miss Jean Riley, cashier at the Windsor theater, 1225 North Clark street, who was shot by a robber in a holdup on Dec. 10. She died early yesterday.

The prisoners are Richard Peabody, 25 years old, 1423 Berteau avenue; Chester Skol, 23 years old, and Arthur La Frana, 24 years old, both of 2621 Cortland street. They were arrested by Lincolnwood police following an automobile accident, found to be armed, and turned over to city police.

The prisoners denied and complicity in the murder of Miss Riley, but police said they have evidence connecting them to the recent robberies of two other movie houses, the Bell and Emmett theaters.

QUINTS' FORTUNE NOW IS $520,000, GUARDIAN SAYS

CALLANDER, Ont., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Judge J. A. Valin, one of the three guardians of the Dionne quintuplets, said today the children now have an income of $17,000 a year from their investments. In addition there is a large income from royalties and other sources.

"Their living expenses are heavy, amounting to $24,000 a year," Valin said. "If future plans for the quints materialize, this $24,000 a year will have to be vastly increased."

Judge Valin said the quints' fortune today amounted to $520,000 and probably will be a million dollars when they are 18 years old, nearly fifteen years hence.

"With the exception of a few thousand dollars cash reserve, every penny is invested in provincial and dominion bonds," he said.

Minnesota Governor Bans Illinois Parolee's Return

Gov. Elmer A. Benson of Minnesota refused yesterday to grant extradition to Illinois of Donald Woolard, alias John White, wanted here for parole violation. Woolard is to be released soon from the Minnesota reformatory in St. Cloud. Gov. Benson wrote W. C. Jones, chairman of the Illinois parole board, that Woolard had learned a trade and had the prospect of a job when released. The governor added that he thought now is the time to give the convict a chance to rehabilitate himself.

TRAILER DANCING CALLED MENACE TO CARS BEHIND

May Be a Clew to Why Horns Sound Loudly.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Fort Myers, Fla., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—"Don't try to pass that trailer ahead," said Mrs. Foust.

The Tribune automobile was towing its cabin cruiser south from Sarasota in U. S. 41 at an open highway cruising pace of 40 miles an hour. Approaching Punta Gorda we followed closely a trailer with an Illinois 1937 trailer license number W-14073.

For the next half hour or so we stayed from 500 to 1,000 feet behind this leader. It was a demonstration of why trailers are not popular with other motorists.

The pace was moderate, about 35 or 38 miles an hour. It was a reasonable rate for driving with a heavy tow, but for unhampered automobiles it was too slow. THE TRIBUNE car and the fellow ahead were barriers to express passenger travel.

Gets Over Center Line.

The leader kept to his own side of the road for the convenience of overtaking trafic in passing. That is, his car stayed on the right side of the road. The end of his trailer swayed erratically, with the left rear wheel occasionally crossing the center line a foot or two.

This trailer dancing from side to side was a menace. Other drivers noticed it and were duly cautious. Cars put two wheels into sand beside the pavement in passing in either direction.

We watched north-bound trailers. There's a heavy trafic of these highway houses on this route. Some of them likewise were wagging their tails as they cruised from 35 to 45 miles an hour. This Illinois outfit ahead was not noticeably worse than the average.

Wife Is Optimistic.

"I'm glad our trailer doesn't sway like that," said Mrs. Foust.

"How do you know it doesn't?"

In the rear view mirror the front end of the trailer could be seen bouncing up and down like the prow of a ship riding the waves. The side mirror didn't give a view of the rear. The trailer could be felt alternating pulling back and pushing forward on the automobile. It teetered on its single axle with slight depressions in the pavement.

"I can't see the tail," said Mrs. Foust, leaning from her front window.

"Maybe those drivers who are passing us are giving us a long and loud horn just because other trailers sway," I suggested.

MAYOR BLOCKED IN PHILADELPHIA GAS RATE FIGHT

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania Supreme court today temporarily restrained Mayor S. Davis Wilson from putting into effect at midnight a proclamation taking over and operating the $70,000,000 city owned gas works in Wilson's fight for 50 cent gas.

The city council yesterday passed over the mayor's veto a new lease giving the Philadelphia Gas Works company, a subsidiary of the United Gas Improvement company, the right to operate the plant for another ten years. The new lease fixed the gas rate at 85 cents a thousand cubic feet for two months, when a commission was to fix a rate for the remainder of 1938. The present rate is 90 cents.

ROOFING CONCERN ACTS TO LESSEN AIRPORT SMOKE

Plans for court action to force abatement of the smoke nuisance at the Amalgamated Roofing company, 6600 South Central avenue, were dropped yesterday when plant officials notified Frank A. Chambers, head of the department of smoke inspection and abatement, that two automatic stokers had been installed and other improvements in smoke control were being made. Stokers eliminate smoke clouds caused by faulty firing.

Representatives of eleven plants in or near the Clearing industrial district, south and southwest of Chicago airport, assured Chambers of their coöperation in freeing the district of smoke dangerous to airplanes.

Judge Joseph A. Graber in Felony court yesterday continued to Jan. 7 a rape charge against Jack C. Russell, 37 years old, a former cowboy and café entertainer. The girl was Miss Margaret Reilly, 18 years old, 1330 Heath avenue, a soda clerk. Russell's lawyer questioned her closely about her admission that she had been with Russell in a restaurant after the alleged attack and made no attempt to get away. Judge Graber commented that the girl's story was "peculiar."

Judge Prystalski to Hear 2d Shanahan Will Contest

Second trial of the court contest for the $850,000 estate of the late David E. Shanahan, veteran Illinois legislator, was assigned yesterday to Judge John Prystalski. Meanwhile negotiations for an out of court settlement were under way between Mrs. Helen Troesch Shanahan, who was left the estate under her husband's disputed will, and his cousins, the Misses Mary and Margaret Flynn. Mr. Shanahan was married 13 days before his death a year ago. The first trial ended in a jury deadlock.

BLUESHIRTS FLEE EGYPTIAN CAMPS; POLICE MOVE IN

New Government Hastens to Reassure Britain.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Carrying out the decree of King Farouk's new government, police today occupied camps of the Nationalist blueshirts throughout the country.

They found the camps empty. The blueshirts, youth organization of the Wafd [nationalist] party which the 18 year old king's bold political moves already had removed from power, had vacated during the night.

Disbandment of the blueshirts was one of the main objectives of the lightning changes of yesterday, when the king dismissed the Wafd premier, Mustapha Nahas Pasha, and named Mohamed Mahmoud in his stead.

Act to Dispel British Fear.

The new government acted to dispel fears the changes were intended to lessen British influence or harm British interests in Egypt. The new premier, in a letter to the king, declared he would do his utmost to carry out the Anglo-Egyptian treaty which established Egypt's independence and to work in harmony with Britain, Egypt's ally.

Britain had watched Egypt's political ferment with anxiety because of the country's vital position with respect to the Suez canal and the Mediterranean, where Italy is contesting British dominance.

The ousted premier, Nahas, declared: "I will continue to struggle for this unhappy nation until the will of God be done."

Quiet After Rioting.

His embittered followers held their tempers, and Cairo and the country were quiet after last night's rioting in the capital in which street lights were smashed and followers of Nahas outside the palace shouted, "Down with Farouk!"

The Wafd holds a large majority in parliament, and the new premier prepared for a parliamentary dissolution if a vote of confidence is refused in Monday's session.

Mahmoud was understood to be considering making changes in parliamentary constituencies. This would require at least six months, and would postpone elections if parliament were dissolved.

Discusses Outbreak

Dr. Karl Meyer (left), medical superintendent of the County hospital, discussing the death of three babies at the hospital.

The death of three babies since Dec. 23 and the closing of two maternity wards at the County hospital yesterday created fears of a new outbreak of the epidemic enteritis that took the lives of thirteen infants at St. Elizabeth's hospital a few weeks ago.

It was learned upon investigation, however, that the three babies at the County hospital died of pneumonia, which was held by Dr. Ole C. Nelson, assistant warden, as normal for the season, since there have been 298 babies born there during December.

Dr. Karl Meyer, medical superintendent of the hospital, said the two maternity wards were closed temporarily because a case of scarlet fever was discovered in a mother shortly after her child was born there. She had been an occupant of both wards before and after the birth.

CAPT. WHEELER, ON POLICE FORCE 31 YEARS, IS DEAD

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Lieut. Lang.

Capt. Paul A. Wheeler, in command of the Morgan Park station, and a member of the police department for thirty-one years, died in his home at 10435 South Hamilton avenue early today after a week's illness. The immediate cause of death was a heart attack he suffered when he leaped from his bed to aid Mrs. Margaret Heinzerling, 88 years old, his mother-in-law, who fell and refractured a hip that was broken recently. He was 58 years old.

Capt. Wheeler was well known in police activities on the south side, where he had spent virtually all of his department career. He joined the police department in 1906, quitting his job as a locomotive engineer on the Illinois Central railroad to do so.

Started at Cottage Grove.

He first served at the old Cottage Grove avenue station. He was made a desk sergeant in 1913, and a lieutenant in 1920. He was promoted to captain in 1925, passing third on the list in the examinations. He was transferred to the Morgan Park station two years ago after previous commands at Englewood and Chicago Lawn. He was born in Aurora, and enlisted there in the 6th Illinois Volunteers for the Spanish-American war. He served in Porto Rico. His widow, Meta, and a son, Paul A. Jr., survive.

Lieut. Lang Dies Suddenly.

Lieut. William C. Lang of the Jefferson Park police, fell dead at a table in the Edgewater Beach hotel last night about an hour before midnight. Lieut. Lang had been detailed to the hotel to help keep order and was seated on the mezzanine overlooking the celebrating crowds.

He was attended immediately after his collapse by Dr. Louis C. French, who pronounced heart disease the cause of his death.

Lieut. Lang was 4. years old and unmarried. He had been a Chicago policeman for twenty years and had many friends throughout the department. He is survived by his father and one sister.

ENGINEERS, EXPERTS TO MEET MONDAY ON NEW AIRPORT PLAN

City engineers and experts from the Chicago plan commission will be called into conference with Mayor Kelly Monday to begin a study of costs involved in the new program for expanding the city airport from 320 to 620 acres—nearly a square mile. The new plan calls for removal of the railroad tracks which now bisect the airport tract to a new location along 55th street just inside the northern bundaries of the extended air field.

It will be necessary to call in officials of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad company which owns the tracks for a renegotiation of an agreement made several months ago. The original plan to which the railroad first agreed called for movement of the tracks to land owned by Raymond E. Herman, but this deal was called off when Mayor Kelly said Herman was demanding an outrageous price for his land. The railroad, however, will not oppose the alternate plan, its officials say.

Dr. Van Wormer of State Health Department Dies

Dr. W. Clarence Van Wormer, Chicago representative of the Illinois state health department since 1923, died in his home at 17842 Dixie highway, Homewood, last night, after a month's illness. He was 50 years old. He received his medical education in St. Louis, Mo., and came to Chicago soon afterward. He was a member of the International Health Officer's association. His widow and his daughter, Mrs. Helen [John] Ladd, survive.

THE DARK PICTURE OF NOW

By CALEB

MANY good people view the present as a dark period in history. And the outlook, they say, is not bright. But they forget that the picture of now is only a still picture—and both the times and we as a people have changed since a moment ago.

A picture of now, to mean anything, must be a moving picture—in relationship to the past and to a projected picture of the future.

Progress represents the accumulation of modest gains over recurring losses. In the midst of the greatest advances come the sharpest setbacks.

Nothing moves in a straight line. However clear a goal may be, the path by which it is reached will be somehow devious. The accidents of existence see to that.

If progress is to be worthwhile, it will not be cheaply bought. Without resistance and reversals, effort would not be required. Without effort—coming back to our starting point—there is stillness and stagnation.

Yes—people are alarmed at the state of affairs in the world. They are alarmed over liberal national political experimentation. They fear that the extension of governmental power is fraught with dangers to our economic system. Their fears need be only for themselves, however, for this country will go on through the years. In due time, steps taken too far in one direction must be retraced in another. For every zig in the chart of our progress, there is a painful zag. No generation can hope to escape its distressing setbacks.

It is true that free peoples have ever advanced through the liberties which have not been curtailed by their governments. Woodrow Wilson said it better:

"Liberty has never come from government. It has always come from the subjects of government. . . . The history of liberty is a history of limitations of governmental power—not the increase of it."

If this American nation is destined to progress, as we have an abiding conviction it is, we will advance by going too far and falling back—but never falling so far as the levels from which we have climbed.

If government reigns too directly today, a morrow will come when it will reign too obliquely.

Patience, not passiveness, should prevail over alarm. This is a bad country to sell short.

RIDICULE DRIVE ON BUSINESS BY ROOSEVELT AIDS

Alibi Speeches Assailed by Congressmen.

ference with the President and referred reporters to his year-end statement for an expression of his views on the business situation. In that statement he said: "In the face of violent business fluctuations, it is small wonder that men of all groups are confused and concerned, although it is difficult to believe that the recession is more than temporary. The employment base is still the difficult factor in the situation."

In the halls of congress today Democrats and Republicans alike jeered at the Ickes-Jackson alibi that a business sitdown strike brought on the depression. Representative John J. O'Connor [D., N. Y.], chairman of the house rules committee, noted that Jackson's authority for the existence of a business strike was "one Sir Arthur Salter, a British economist who pretends to know more about our own situation than we do."

Salter, writing in the Yale review for December, suggested that business had gone on a "capital strike to use as a cudgel to whack concessions out of government."

Quotation Is Continued.

"But Mr. Jackson was careful not to continue his quotation from Salter," Representative O'Connor said, "because his audience would have heard this: 'But it is reasonably certain that if the element of distrust of governmental action could be eliminated, the purely economic factors are favorable to an early termination of the present recession and a resumption of the upward movement.

"How ridiculous are the assertions that business deliberately brought on the 'recession' to get 'hunk' with the administration has been the subject of intelligent comment in the press.

"Of course the steel companies suffered a loss in their production from 70 per cent of capacity to 20 per cent just because they refused to accept orders for their material!

Resorts to Sarcasm.

"Of course the automobile manufacturers have been laying off tens of thousands of their employés in spite of the increased demand for their products!

"Of course the retail stores did less business during the recent holidays than in 1936 because they just refused to sell their nicknacks to the public!

"Of course the garment manufacturers in my town have laid off the needle workers in my district because they do not like the style of dress of official Washington!"

O'Connor said he fully appreciated the political hazard of being caught talking to an employer but "solely in the interest of the sixty million of our people who are employed by and obtain their livelihood through the five million employers in our country" he dared to wish a Happy New Year for "those 'fiends,' the business men."

Calls It Act of Violence.

Representative Bertrand H. Snell [R., N. Y.], minority leader of the house, called the Ickes diatribe "an act of dreadful violence against the peace and progress of America and the world."

"Ickes has pronounced the New Deal benediction upon 1937—let us hate!" said Representative Snell. "His speech is a black page in the history of the United States. Its violent and demoralizing demagoguery will one day symbolize the entire administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"The people have not forgotton that as recently as eight months ago an army of Democratic national committee salesmen were distributing to some of Ickes' sixty families, at $250 per copy, campaign books personally autographed by the President of the United States," Snell added. "That adventure in good will among the monopolies since has been pronounced by Attorney General Cummings to have been not a violation of the federal corrupt practices act."

Harrison Denounces Ickes.

Amidst the general chorus of derision and denunciation of the Ickes-Jackson tirades, only the voice of Senator George W. Norris [Radical, Neb.] was raised in their defense. He agreed with Ickes and Jackson, saying that "like Sampson of old, pulling down the pillars of the temple," the business men were ganging up on President Roosevelt.

The National Association of Manufacturers, coming out wholehearted ly for a strict enforcement of the anti-monopoly laws, derided Mr. Jackson's one year record as the Roosevelt trust buster. This record includes the institution of exactly eight suits and the conclusion of five.

HORSE 'N' WAGON DAYS RETURNING, SAY TAX FIGURES

There were 42,680 more vehicle licenses issued for automobiles in Chicago in 1937 than in 1936. But the most surprising development of the year to City Collector Louis Rixman was the return of the horse.

His annual report showed that there were 3,804 horses drawing wagons which paid a wheel tax in 1937. This was an increase of 390 horses over the 1936 total of 3,414.

There were 612,799 licenses issued for various types of vehicles during 1937, compared with 550,899 in 1936. The revenue from this tax rose from $4,600,006 to $5,086,639.

PUT UNDER COURT SUPERVISION.

Gerhardt Kasilkowski, 18 years old, of 2305 North Maplewood avenue, who was shot when he attempted to force his way into a home at 2228 North Leavitt street Oct. 16, was put under supervision of the Boys' court yesterday until Dec. 30, 1938.

JUDGE KAVANAGH, UNYIELDING FOE OF CRIME, IS DEAD

Heart Ailment Fatal at 78 Years.

Marcus A. Kavanagh, judge of the Superior court for thirty-seven years until his retirement in 1935, and nationally known as an authority on crime and punishment, died yesterday in a hospital at Hollywood, Cal. He was 78 years old.

Marcus Kavanagh.

News of his death was telephoned to Attorney William D. Saltiel by Mrs. Kavanagh. The judge had suffered from a heart ailment for some time. The Kavanaghs, who lived at the Auditorium hotel here, went to California several months ago because of his illness.

First on Bench at 26.

Judge Kavanagh was born of Irish parents at Des Moines, Ia., on Sept. 3, 1859. After being graduated from Niagara university and the University of Iowa law school, he served two terms as city attorney of Des Moines. Elected judge of the 9th Iowa judicial district in 1885, at the ageof 26, he served for four years, resigning to practice law in Chicago.

Judge Kavanagh was an attorney here for nearly a decade, first as the partner of John Gibbons, who later became a Superior court judge. During that period Judge Kavanagh also joined the national guard, serving during the Spanish-American war as colonel of the 7th Illinois volunteer infantry.

In 1898 Gov. Tanner appointed him to fill a vacancy on the Superior court bench. Judge Kavanagh was reëlected for succeeding terms until 1935, when he failed of renomination in the Republican primary.

Inspires Fear in Criminals.

It was while taking his regular turn with the other judges sitting in the Criminal court that Judge Kavanagh came to be feared by criminals. He believed a strict application of the law was the greatest deterrent to crime.

On at least three occasions, Judge Kavanagh imposed the death penalty on men who had pleaded guilty to murder in the hope of escaping with the usual sentence of life imprisonment. He also often contended that a lawyer should not defend a man he knows to be guilty.

A lecturer and author on criminal law, Judge Kavanagh was often consulted on its revision and simplification. In 1923 he was a member of a commission which studied law enforcement in England, and in 1930 appeared before the House of Commons to urge that England retain capital punishment.

Known for Chivlary.

A softer side of his judicial nature appeared in Judge Kavanagh's chivalry toward women. In 1929 he refused to jail a woman for perjury, holding that she was entitled to tell a lie to protect her honor.

Judge Kavanagh's first wife was Herminie McGibney Templeton, an author and daughter of an Irish army officer. She died in 1933, and a year later he married his secretary, Jeanne Latour, then 27 years old.

STATE PENSION PLAN GIVEN O. K., GOVERNOR SAYS

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Gov. Horner said he received word from Washington today that the federal social security board had given a final O. K. to Illinois' plan for old age assistance.

Asserting that the board's action meant permanent federal approval and financial assistance, the governor said it marked success of a six months' drive to reorganize the Illinois setup.

Federal funds were shut off temporarily last summer, pending a reorganization of the state's administrative machinery. The resumption of federal grants was conditional upon continued progress in making the suggested changes.

John C. Weigel, administrative assistant in the public welfare department, said he was informed at the same time that the state's grant for the first quarter in 1938 had been approved. The amount was not stated, he said.

MILK WILL SELL AT 10 CENTS A QUART IN N. Y. ON JAN. 3

New York, Dec. 31.—[Special.]—William Morgan Jr., commissioner of markets, announced this afternoon that beginning Monday grocery stores throughout the city would begin selling Grade B milk at 10 cents a quart, instead of 11 and 12 cents. The decision for the reduction came following a conference of representatives of the industry.

Earlier Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, sulking over the defeat of his dictatorial experiment for 9 cent milk, rejected the half cent reduction proposed by the major distributors operating in the metropolitan area, and warned the companies that "the fight is not over."

Six weeks ago, the mayor said, the half cent reduction would have been adequate, declaring that in a conference at that time the large companies and some independent distributors refused to comply with a request to reduce prices.

Zwikel objected to the policeman's remarks and acted as he did to bring the incident before the public, said Dr. Rotman. The case was continued to Jan. 6.

Authors Record Bali's Beauty in Fiction and Fact

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Tale of Bali," by Vicki Baum. [Doubleday Doran, $2.75.] Published yesterday.

"Island of Bali," by Miguel Covarrubias. [Knopf, $5.]

"Bali, the last paradise," is the subject of two recent books, each, in its own field, certain of unrivaled popularity, and both celebrating a Bali as different from the cruise tourists' three day sightseeing contacts as the real Chicago is from the city a traveler would know after spending two hours here between trains.

Both Vicki Baum and Miguel Covarrubias have gone into the homes of the natives, into their hearts, and into their deeply rooted beliefs for their material, the one in fiction the other in fact. Both of them leave the reader with the same impression of a gentle race, laughing the years through in flower-scented happiness, and when tragedy, either personal or communal, overtakes them, bearing the will of the gods with a strangely heroic stoicism.

Vicki Baum took over the papers of Dr. Fabius, a Dutchman revered by the natives during his lifetime among them. From his manuscripts she has written "Tale of Bali," a story as simple as "The Good Earth" [and much resembling it, though not so great a novel]. The lives of the native Balinese fill its 400 pages vividly.

The peasant Pak and his family and his friends are the principals in a drama of simple human passions and of eventual tragedy. The tragedy provides one of the most magnificent gestures of mass courage in literature, as did its actual enactment when hundreds of Balinese men, women, and children threw themselves in a frenzy against conquering Dutch cannon or dramatically slew themselves.

An infinitude of detail of Balinese customs, belief, and psychology is all captured in these pictures of native life which are photographed in slow motion—a noticeably slow motion when compared with Vicki Baum's swift-lensed "Grand Hotel."

Miguel Covarrubias, famous Mexican painter and illustrator, found himself, as did Vicki Baum, completely enchanted with the island of Bali, and, like her, he lived there as nearly one with the natives as it was possible. His record of the life, customs, beliefs, and physical contour of the island and its people tells of an artist's joy in color, and form, of a human being's zest in understanding other human beings.

"The Island of Bali" also proves Covarrubias an artist in a field previously untilled by him—literature. He has written a vastly interesting book.

These two books strangely complement one another, the factual one illuminating the fiction, the fiction making even more alive the fact.

A Glance Back Over Year's List of Best Sellers

Literary prophets assure us that 1938 will be a vintage year!

Already the literary horizon is lighted with stars; destined best sellers are piled in publishers' shipping rooms. But the real destiny of a book lies neither with prophets nor makers, but with the public. Likewise a look at any year's list of best sellers will tell a historian much about the nation's current psychology.

Take a look at these titles of 1937 which have been best sellers for eight weeks or more. You will find that of the ten in nonfiction eight are informative—either simple self-help books like "How to Win Friends and Influence People" or scholarly self-education books like "Mathematics for the Million" or "The Arts"—or they record interesting historical facts. One is amusing, not contemplative, autobiography; another, "Conversation at Midnight," is concerned with the state of the world as a record of the present rather than with ideas about the future.

Of the thirteen novels three are out and out historical romance. All the others, except one, "Of Mice and Men," are in the panoramic tradition, rather than in the intenser one in which the author slices down through the lives of one or two characters to the psychological core of their relationship to each other, and none is concerned with social justice.

Perhaps the reading public of 1937 didn't want to be harrowed too deeply with fiction nor taken into any flights of fancy by fact. That is only one of dozens of conclusions one may draw from this list. What are yours?

Following are books which have been on the best seller list eight weeks or more in 1937:

Papal Court Reporter Writes Observations on Pope and Vatican

"A Reporter at the Papal Court," by Thomas B. Morgan. [Longmans, $3.]

Thomas B. Morgan has covered Vatican City for news services since 1921. He was there when Pope Benedict XV. died, sent the story of the election of Achille Ratti as Pope Pius XI., and watched the struggles of the Roman Catholic church to reach peace with Italy.

About half of his book is devoted to a biography of the ailing Pius, in which he brings out the pope's scholarliness, but fails to emphasize Pius' stubbornness. The book is expository rather than critical. The reader would judge that Mr. Morgan is a devout Catholic if the jacket did not proclaim him a non-Catholic. W. D. O.

HUNT MEANS TO LEGALIZE BABY OF SCHOOLGIRL

Mother, 12, and Father, 13, Too Young to Wed.

Linton, Ind., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Daddy Tommy Chapman was in seclusion at the home of family friends here tonight and Mama Betty June Lancer was wondering what all the fuss could be about legitimizing their son who is four days old and weighs 10½ pounds. Daddy Tommy, who has not seen his progeny, is 13 years old, and Mother Betty June is 12.

One suggestion which has been brought forward came from the attorney general's office in Indianapolis today. This was that the children might take out a marriage license and live together until such time as they might use it legally.

Law Prevents Marriage.

Indiana state laws prevent their immediate marriage because the minimum ages for wedding in the state are 18 for boys and 16 for girls. Tommy, whose home is in Detroit, but who has been visiting here for the Christmas holidays, has been eager to marry Betty June ever since she told him she was to become a mother, but he has not been allowed to see her.

Meanwhile, Tommy is under court supervision. He was arraigned Tuesday and placed under a $500 bond. He could be fined from $200 to $1,000 or sentenced to one year in jail. Authorities are loath to prosecute the boy. Moreover, Betty June's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lancer, do not want to have the father of their grandson prosecuted.

Ask $50 a Year for Support.

The baby, who is described as a fine, lusty infant, will be named Thomas Chapman Lancer—at least temporarily. Betty June's father said he would ask his friend, Fred Chapman, the other grandfather, to pay $50 yearly for the support of the child until he is 14 years old.

Today Betty June received a proposal of marriage in a letter signed Ross Sutherland and mailed at Frankfort, Ind. The writer said he was eager to be married and that he was willing to give Betty June's child a name. The suitor said he was 26 years old and enclosed a photograph.

Two Hit Bridewell Detour on a Private Gold Rush

Two young men who turned to blackmail to finance a gold-mining expedition had their plans deferred yesterday. Rudy Blaha, 1839 South Ashland avenue, and Bruno Rojek, 1919 Washburne avenue, each 21 years old, were sentenced to the county jail for six months by Municipal Judge Eugene Holland. Prof. Kyle Marlow of Iowa State college at Ames, who once visited a nudist camp for an hour with his clothes on, told the court they threatened to publicize him as a nudist unless he paid them $3,500.

RELIEF STOPPED IN 4,845 CASES AFTER A SURVEY

655 Rejected When They Reapply.

Relief was stopped in more than 10 per cent of the 34,979 employable cases on the rolls of the Chicago Relief administration when the heads of all of these families were forced to reapply for relief last October. This was revealed yesterday by Commissioner Leo M. Lyons of the CRA, who said the final results of the survey made last fall have not been completed yet.

Of the 4,845 carses temporarily or permanently removed, 655 were rejected when it was found they did not need relief; 2,545 failed to keep appointments for reapplications, and the remainder notified the relief authorities that they had obtained private employment.

Some Reinstated Later.

"It is not correct to say that all of these cases were dropped because of the survey," said E. E. Ferebee, statistician for the CRA. "Many of them undoubtedly would have left the rolls in the regular monthly turnover. In addition, many of those who failed to keep their appointments probably came in later and were reinstated.

"Some of the people on the rolls do not know enough English to follow directions mailed to them and they do nothing about the instructions until their checks are missing."

Ferebee said the December roll of the CRA is being examined to see how many of the 4,845 cases were reinstated since the survey was completed on Nov. 5.

"The fact that so many cases dropped off is significant," Lyons said. "Although we can't be sure that it presents evidence of fraud, we shall have a sample answer to the fraud question after the demonstration district goes into operation."

Adequate Staf for District.

A staf large enough to handle the work adequately will be installed in the Canal district, on the near south and west sides, on Jan. 15 as a demonstration of how the relief load could be handled if an adequate staf were available throughout the city. Workers in the district each will have 75 cases, as compared with an average of 300 cases per worker now.

H. K. Seltzer, district WPA director, reported yesterday that 10,444 reliefers were assigned to WPA projects during December. He said that he could not tell how many of the reliefers actua.y have reported for work until next week, since they have ten days after the assignment notice is issued to report on the job.

Seltzer also said 2,657 persons left WPA during December to return to work in private industry.

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS UNION'S RIGHT TO PICKET

For the second time in two weeks the Illinois Appellate court held that a labor union may picket a company which does not employ any union members, and may advertise its views by allowing pickets to carry banners.

The decision overruled an injunction issued by Judge Francis Allegretti for Raymond F. Schuster, who has an automobile salesroom at 3704 South Western avenue. It was directed against the International Association of Machinists and Auto Mechanics.

Changing social and legal concepts, the opinion stated, hold it is lawful for any party of a labor dispute to publicize its views in a lawful manner, regardless of the issues involved. Although Schuster has the right not to deal with the union, the court said, the union has the same right to make this fact known to the public.

GETS 9 MONTHS FOR HOLDUP.

Paul Dale Morrison, 44 years old, 809 South State street, who confessed robbing a restaurant at 7 South Wabash avenue of $5 on Christmas day, was sentenced yesterday to serve nine months in the county jail by Judge Joseph A. Graber.

MRS. MAXWELL D. PIERCE.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—The weird story of how her husband and a nurse, Miss Margaret Gordon, drugged her into a stupor, drove her to Pittsburgh and compelled her to give them $15,000 in cash and jewels is told by Mrs. Maxwell D. Pierce. Both the husband and nurse have been indicted in Pittsburgh for conspiracy, robbery, and administering drugs. Mrs. Pierce further charges that the two returned her to Cleveland, where she was committed to a psychopathic ward as insane.

ACT TO REVOKE DENTAL LICENSE OF DR. A. A. DUBIN

A recommendation that his license be revoked was made by the dental committee of the state department of registration and education and notification mailed to Dr. A. A. Dubin, who has dental offices at 84 West Madison street, it was learned yesterday. Attorney Philip H. Ringer, counsel for the department, said the committee found him guilty of unprofessional conduct.

Their decision was based upon the Illinois Supreme court's ruling last October, which upheld a $500 fine imposed on Dr. Dubin for violation of the dental practice act. He was convicted by a jury in the Municipal court of Judge Harold P. O'Connell in October, 1936. Testimony was that he employed solicitors, a loudspeaker, a card trick, a lecture and a sale of tooth powder to stimulate business in violation of the advertising section of the dental practice act.

He has twenty days in which to ask Director John J. Hallihan of the department of registration and education for a rehearing. If it is refused, he can appeal to the Circuit court.

ORDERS 300 CABS OFF STREET; 700 MORE MUST GO

Michael Sokol, president of the Checker Cab company, said yesterday that orders have been given to 300 private cab owners operating under the Checker system to take their cabs off the street. These are the first of 1,000 cabs that the Checker and Yellow Cab companies must remove from circulation under a new ordinance which goes into effect Jan. 8.

The first contingent of cabs to be removed, Sokol said, are obsolete. The drivers will be absorbed into other shifts on cabs left in operation.

Rates will be increased by 5 cents on the flag pull when the new ordinance becomes effective. The ordinance gives the two companies a virtual monopoly until 1945.

PUT EISENDRATH ESTATE VALUE AT THREE MILLIONS

Court Approves Final Accounting.

A valuation of $3,000,000 was placed yesterday on the estate of Mrs. Rose L. Eisendrath, widow of William N. Eisendrath, who was head of the Monarch Leather company, 1127 Division street.

The law firm of Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt made the valuation in Probate court when Judge John F. O'Connell approved a final accounting and distribution. When admitted to probate soon after Mrs. Eisendrath's death Oct. 9, 1936, the estate was valued at $225,000. In an inventory two months later the value was placed at $650,000.

Largest Holding in Stock.

From a listing of assets, the largest item in the estate is 5,000 shares of the lether company. Shares of the company are held privately by the Eisendrath family, and their value was not disclosed. Other assets include minor stock holdings in twenty-four other companies, and cash receipts of $312,051. Against them are a federal inheritance tax of $113,926 and a state estate tax of $20,603.

Mrs. Eisendrath's will divided her estate among her three children. They are William N. Jr., 442 Wellington avenue, and Edwin W., 546 Hawthorne place, who conduct their father's business, and Mrs. Marion Horween, 560 Hawthorne place.

Approves Widow's Award.

Judge O'Connell yesterday also approved a widow's award of $20,000 to Mrs. Marjorie Davis, 600 Sheridan road, Glencoe, widow of Abel Davis, former chairman of the Chicago Title and Trust company.

Mrs. Davis and her three children, Florence, Abel Jr., and Jean, were represented by the same law firm. No estimate has been made on the size of the estate. Mr. Davis, who died Jan. 8, held the rank of major general retired in the Illinois National Guard.

URGES COLLEGE PRESIDENTS TO AID SYPHILIS WAR

Calls for Education of All Students on Disease.

Instruction of students on tuberculosis, syphilis, and gonorrhea is a legal, social, and educational responsibility of the trustees, presidents, and faculties of universities.

This assertion was made yesterday by Dr. Helen B. Pryor of Stanford university at a meeting of the American Student Health association in the Stevens hotel launching a program for complete communicable disease control in the nation's colleges. Health directors of 144 schools are members of the association.

Dr. Pryor proposed that college health services obtain acknowledgment of such responsibility by university presidents. She said that competent stafs and equipment should be provided to examine and treat students for these diseases. She recommended coöperation with public health authorities in detection and control.

Opposes Specialized Instruction.

Dr. Pryor opposed any specialized sex hygiene instruction in the colleges.

"Venereal disease," she said, "should be taught, but only in relation to other communicable diseases. Overemphasis on syphilis and gonorrhea tends to develop phobias."

The committee on health problems of college women, of which Dr. Pryor is chairman, debated her proposal, but postponed action.

Dr. Charles E. Lyght of Carleton college, Northville, Minn., reported to the association that tuberculosis tests of 200,000 students in 91 schools durin the 1936-'37 term showed 561 had the disease. Twenty-seven per cent had a positive reaction to a skin test, indicating they either had had the disease or were susceptible.

Seek to Test Every Student.

Dr. Lyght said efforts are being made to give the test to every American college student, since it enables a physician to forestall an infection two and a half years before ill health would be expected.

He said the college survey showed tubercular rates were highest on either coast and lowest in the midwest. Compulsory testing of cows in this section is a large factor in the difference, he said.

The eye health committee reported that of 1,250,000 American college students 15 to 25 per cent enter college with eye defects. Dr. Ruth E. Boynton of the University of Minnesota said research has shown that more than twice as many collegians have visual defects as industrial workers of the same age group. A study at Cornell university showed that 50 per cent of freshmen wear or should wear glasses.

INVENTORY OF HORLICK ESTATE $16,699,900, COURT IS INFORMED

Racine, Wis., Dec. 31.—(AP)—An inventory of the estate of William Horlick, malted milk manufacturer and philanthropist, filed today in probate court showed a total appraisal of $16,699,900. Horlick died in September, 1936.

The inventory revealed that at the time of his death Horlick had $541,245 in cash in seven banks; that his investments in bonds, with acrued interest of $11,970, amounted to $5,793,269, and that stock investments totaled $10,188,274.

The principal amount of Horlick's stock investments was in the Stafford Investment company. These totaled $9,994,363.

Horlick left the bulk of his fortune to members of his family. Old employés received the equivalent of a year's salary. Factory executives were remembered in special bequests.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

MILKWEED.

December 31, 1937.

IF you walk through an ungrazed woodlot at this season one of the first things you notice is the large number of weeds that have kept their brown, dead stalks above the frozen ground. We were conscious of this in the timber on the experimental farm when we hiked through the scrub oaks and haws near the big pond recently. All around were the lifeless stalks of the common flowering weed known as the fleabane. In some places the juncos had been feeding in the thickets to get the seeds of some of the dead weeds.

Closer to the big pond was a big patch of milkweed. The grass had been beaten down by frosts and storms, but the stalks of these weeds were upright. There were two kinds of milkweeds here . . . the narrow leaved and the swamp. At this time of year the big, brown pods of these weeds are very noticeable. Some of the plants had not lost all of their seeds. Fluffy, cottony seeds were in a few of the old pods at the top of each plant.

Used As Medicine.

The flowering weeds known as milkweeds are quite an interesting group considering the place the plants have in the herb doctor's practice. The common milkweed gets its name from the fact that a milky solution flows from the stem when it is broken. One of the species [Butterfly weed or Pleurisy root] was used by the Indians for medicine and food. They used the root in the treatment of pleurisy, and the green fruit was used in the cooking of buffalo meat, much as green peppers are used by housewives today for seasoning.

The Indians also extracted a crude sugar from the milkweed. The narrow-leaved milkweed [which is common on the farm] has a practical use in the southern states, where the juice of the plant is extracted and used as a remedy for snake and insect bites.

The common milkweed provides a fiber that is used in paper making and the weaving of inexpensive cloths. Experiments have been made on the possibility of extracting a synthetic rubber from the secretion of "milk." Several varieties of oil have been made from the seeds and the stem.

Rise Out of Snow.

When the ground is covered with snow most of the small vegetation is covered for the winter. But the milkweed and a few of its sturdy companions rise out of the snow to present miniature forests of brown stems, tan pods, and seeds.

The interesting thing about the patch of milkweed on the farm is the way it catches one's eye at this time of the year. It should have commanded our attention when plants were green and tall behind the willows at the edge of the pond. But we barely noticed the milkweeds last fall. Now that winter is here and there is no competition among the flowering weeds, the tall brown stalks are very conspicuous.

Americans who are in touch with current political and economic trends do not expect the new year to be an easy one. There will be no comfortable coasting in 1938. We are in serious trouble now and there is little to suggest that a change for the better is near; rather the contrary.

The times call above all for fortitude. The citizen who believes in free institutions because under them civilization makes its longest forward strides must not pursue the easy course of submitting to the politicians' will. The politicians will promise everything and anything to gain mastery over the nation, but in the end their proposals offer only further restrictions on individual liberty of thought and action. If we tire of the fight in the critical year, 1938, our children and their children will remember it as the year of surrender and us as weaklings. We must prepare our minds for days when to carry on the struggle will seem futile. Those days will test the quality of our courage.

The business man in particular faces a severe test in the months ahead. He will have many worries, not least of which will be his concern for those dependent for their welfare upon his leadership. He will have to bear this burden while being reviled for greed and incompetence. If we come through safely we will owe much to his cool head and his determination.

Men possessed of fortitude will not be licked in 1938. The weaklings will fall. A good motto for the new year is: "Can you take it?"

IN THE GREAT TRADITION.

With the official closing of the Panay tragedy as a diplomatic incident the American people are free to digest whatever lessons the affair presents for their reflection. One of the most gratifying is offered by the splendid morale exhibited by the officers and men of the Panay. It was not surprising, for the American people have strong confidence in the navy, but it was profoundly satisfactory to have so brilliant a demonstration that its confidence is justified. The conduct of Commander Hughes, and, as he testifies, that of all his men, is worthy of the highest traditions of American seamen and of the naval force which bears and guards the flag on all the seas. The nation appreciates the full significance of their gallantry and competence and is deeply grateful.

MR. ICKES AND THE WELKIN.

The announcer who preceded Mr. Harold Ickes on the radio Thursday night did not explain, as is sometimes done for Charlie McCarthy and Betty Lou, that the voices you hear actually proceed from one person. Indeed, Mr. Ickes might have done better on the lap of Edgar Bergen or Tommy Riggs.

The secretary of the interior probably felt that he had already been blanketed by Robert H. Jackson, the trust buster of the attorney general's office, who had preceded him with two attacks on the monopolistic enemies of the people. Mr. Ickes as a follow-up had to extend himself to make the welkin ring. He had to be a one man uprising of the people in revolt. Although he was fairly good as the old knitting woman at the foot of the scaffold, he was weak as the mob sacking the wineshops, inadequate as the rumble of the tumbrils, and unsatisfactory as the roar of the populace.

His execution of Henry Ford needs polishing up. The head he raises looks like something stuffed with straw. It might be his own. Mr. Ickes is a mouse trap which thinks it is baited for bear. Some people would rather have him tell how he paid for his house.

THE YOUNG IDEA.

Representative Schnackenberg's remarks on public school education will have the indorsement of a very large majority of the adult citizenry. The gist of his comment is that "it is more beneficial to the pupil to have a thoroughgoing knowledge, for instance, of ordinary arithmetic, than it is to have only a fleeting acquaintance with it, coupled with a like superficial knowledge of Latin-American history."

No doubt it will appear deplorably reactionary to many inspirational pedagogs, but we think with Mr. Schnackenberg that it is better to know a few things well than to know many things superficially, and we cling to the notion that in the elementary schools elementary subjects should be thoroughly taught.

Are they? We gather from various informed sources that they are not. College teachers generally complain that they are compelled to expend time and effort upon teaching pupils what they ought to know before they arrive at the college gate. A case in point is at hand. We have an essay on Japan's wants and needs, which its author, a high school pupil aged 16, wishes run as an editorial in THE TRIBUNE. We suppose it is the result of school discussions of world affairs. Its views reflect a reading of the newspapers and perhaps a few current magazine articles and are as intelligent as it is fair to expect from the average wide-awake lad of sixteen. But it is plain that he has been encouraged to assail the problems of statecraft rather than to learn how to spell or punctuate. If his instruction in other rudiments has been as ineffective his schooling has failed to give him some important things he and his parents have a right to require of it. There are many improvements in the technique of teaching which are admirable. There is a wholesome spirit of criticism and inquiry among educators. But public education should keep its feet on the ground, recognizing that it has a primary duty to provide the rudiments of useful knowledge needed by every one, whatever his future occupation, and to provide the rudimentary discipline upon which sound mental progress is based. The energy of elementary and secondary school pupils should be concentrated for these purposes and not dissipated upon interests with which they are not yet prepared to deal intelligently.

A SOURCE OF INDUSTRIAL UNREST.

Absentee ownership of land was one of the principal causes of the French revolution. It has been the source of unrest elsewhere, notably in India and Ireland. Absentee ownership, Prof. Frank H. Knight has pointed out, gave rise to ecconomic and social problems of wide ramifications. One of the important factors in the situation, Prof. Knight says, was "the removal of the higher nobility to the capital after the final triumph of the crown over feudalism and their transformation into parasitic and extravagant courtiers."

Absentee ownership is not important in American agriculture, but a modification of it, absentee control, is characteristic of a very wide range of business activity in the United States. Here boards of directors stand in the position of the owners, although the members of the board themselves frequently own less than 5 per cent of the stock of the enterprise which they control. The directors of many corporations—too many Chicago corporations, by the way—are off in New York City, the financial capital of the country. True, no transformation into "parasitic and extravagant courtiers" may be taking place, but the social life and unrivaled amusements are among the magnetic forces which draw directors' offices and directors' meetings to New York.

Philip Hampson in a series of surveys has pointed out that many of the largest corporations whose business is far in the hinterland have principal offices in New York. Railroads which do not come within a thousand miles of Wall street have their home offices there. A majority of the directors of some of the largest manufacturing companies in the middle west are from New York. Some companies which draw but a small part of their sales from the east are completely dominated by easterners. The strange part of it is that the central financial control represents but a small minority interest.

There is, of course, a decided advantage to a business when it is headed by one who commands great local prestige. The local managers of businesses controled in the east, however, generally have subordinate positions in the community. As top men they might be expected to exercise considerable influence in a city's civic and political life. Logically they might be chosen to head the local charities and the chamber of commerce. But rarely are they given such honors. That is because it is generally felt that in enterprise elsewhere controled economic considerations are wholly determining, and these considerations may come in conflict at times with the interests of the community.

Then, too, remote control is a leading cause of unrest. Workers, however generous the pay basis, feel that members of boards of directors who remove themselves from all personal contact with workers and with operations cannot have a humane attitude. The placing of the control of business in the hands of those who operate it would go a long way toward solving industry's present troubles.

Editorial of the Day

SECRETARY WALLACE ENTERTAINS.

[Council Bluffs Nonpareil.]

Secretary Wallace recently entertained a group of Negro editors from all over the country at government expense. Not only were their hotel bills paid while in Washington but they were given free railroad transportation.

"We have had a difficult time getting information into these Negro newspapers about the secretary's program," a department attaché naïvely explained.

He hastened to add that some Republican papers were represented, as if that made everything hunkydory. One, the Chicago Defender, actually supported Landon during the last campaign. Such a forgiving spirit on the part of Mr. Wallace is almost unbelievable, but there you have it.

It seems that a good many Negroes read only Negro papers and "if the secretary's program" is to be gotten over to them heroic efforts are necessary. Hence the free trips to Washington.

Doubtless an editor with the memory of two glorious days in the nation's capital and a round trip railroad ticket to boot may confidently be expected to look with a kindly eye on the department's publicity handouts in the future. The visitors also had their pictures taken with "Marse Henry."

The ostensible reason for paying the Negro editors' expenses was that they were too poor to defray the expenses of the trip themselves.

We are not advised whether other "poor" editors are to be invited to Washington at government expense or not. A good many of the secretary's former editorial brethren in Iowa would enjoy a two day visit to the national capital with all expenses paid.

We doubt if the Republican editors would enjoy having their pictures taken with "Marse Henry," but perhaps in the interest of harmony that feature of the excursion could be omitted.

Congress has never appropriated any money for transporting editors, white or Negro, to Washington, but the press section of the department "believed they had sufficient general authority."

Apparently New Deal officials have sufficient "authority" to spend money for anything they choose, but no authority to effect any savings. Ten per cent of all the soil conservation funds, or $44,000,000, went for administrative expenses, it was revealed during the senate debate the other day.

We are not informed whether the Negro editors' trip to Washington came out of the soil conservation fund or not.

HER MOMENT.

Mrs. Smythe-Brown was making the final arrangements for her elaborate reception.

"Bridget," she said to her old servant, "for the first 30 minutes after 6 o'clock I want you to stand at the drawing room door and call the guests' names as they arrive."

Bridget's face lit up.

"Very well, ma'am," she replied, "I've been wanting to do that to some of your friends for years."—The Insulter.

ACROPHOBIA.

The cozy little corner occupied by the late Front Views and Profiles having been abandoned for a new location, we confess to a slight touch of acrophobia. Looking downward from the opening sentence, there is a long stretch of white space to fill. Our thoughts—such as they are—reel dizzily; we clutch at a passing wisecrack for immediate support, peruse quickly and hopefully the morning mail, avert our eyes from the frightening shaft of white space below, and try to think what that story was we heard at dinner last night. . . .

THREAT.

A man who had celebrated the arrival of the new year with thoroughness was walking down the street leading an octopus on a string. It stopped frequently to shoot out its poisonous liquid on anything it thought edible, and this halting progress annoyed the celebrant. He finally said petulantly to the octopus, "If you don't stop that I'll take a bromide and forget you."

BELATED CHRISTMAS CARD NOTE.

SETTING HIM STRAIGHT.

Then there was the literal little boy, his head still filled with Christmas, who, when his father, indicating the door left standing open, inquired if he had been brought up in a barn, answered dreamily:

"No, daddy, that was Jesus."

AFTER THE FRENCH.

A gentleman who lives in an apartment house in Riverside, who leaves his rubbers outside his door, is still trying to find out who places a nice red apple in one of them Christmas eve with a card reading "Le Pere Noel."

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

Had you lived in the sixteenth century you would have considered plain ordinary pins an acceptable New Year's gift. Metal pins were invented some time before 1543, and the phrase "pin money" comes from the fact that the money given for their purchase was thus identified.

—Gloves, too, are traditional New Year's gifts. In an earlier century when a sum of money was given instead it was called glove money. Sir Thomas More, when he decided a case in favor of a lady named Croaker while he was Lord Chancellor, received a pair of gloves the following New Year's, with forty gold coins inside. He returned the gold with the note, "Mistress, since it were against good manners to refuse your New Year's gift, I am content to take your gloves, but as for the lining I utterly refuse it."

—The first pair of silk stockings recorded was a New Year's gift to Queen Elizabeth, whose New Year's day swag was considerable. Everybody from her ministers of state to her majesty's dustman gave her New Year's gifts. Howell, in his History of the World, writes, "Queen Elizabeth in 1561 was presented with a pair of black silk stockings by her silk woman, Mrs. Montague, and thenceforth she never wore cloth hose any more."

PRIVATE LIVES.

The town is filled with celebrities over the New Year. Mary Pickford arrived from the coast to spend New Year's with her husband, Buddy Rogers. . . . Gregory Ratoff, some pounds heavier but excitedly speaking the same amusing broken English, to spend it with Mrs. Ratoff—Eugenie Leontovich, playing in "Tovarich. . . . Gilbert Miller arrived in town to see Helen Hayes in his "Victoria Regina" production. When the Ratoffs and Mr. Miller and Miss Hayes were gathered at Ernest Byfield's apartment for Russian food, Miss Hayes' husband, Charles MacArthur, telephoned from their home in Nyack.

THANK YOU.

There have been many heartwarming notes, verses, and limericks in the mail apropos the new job. Modesty, not lack of appreciation, prevents their being printed—some of the best at least. We do offer, however, the succinct comment of S. F. D., who addressed his letter thus:

FINE!

THE WASSAIL BOWL

[From an Old English Recipe].

Simmer a small quantity of the following spices in a teacup of water—cardamums, cloves, nutmeg, mace, ginger, cinnamon, and coriander. When done, put the spice to two, four or six bottles of port, sherry, or madeira, with one and one-half pounds of fine loaf sugar [pounded] to four bottles, and set all on the fire in a clean bright sauce pan; meanwhile have yolks of twelve and whites of six eggs well whisked up in it. Then, when the spiced and sugared wine is a little warm, take out one teacupful, and so on for three or four cups; after which, when it boils, add the whole of the remainder, pouring it in gradually, and stirring it briskly all the time, so as to froth it. The moment a fine froth is obtained, toss in twelve fine soft roasted apples, and send it up hot.

But you can just whip us up an eggnog.

RECIPE.

THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY SPEAKS.

DEAR JOHN:

The very next time you fly to our city you must visit our Antiquarian museum and spend some time inspecting the section devoted to textiles—this apropos to our chat about colds. One department particularly—that labeled "handkerchiefs"—affords examples of the weaver's art of bygone days. These articles vary in size from that of a thumbnail to a yard or more in length and breadth; and the several varieties of threads include gossamer as well as a peculiar type of cellulose which, although rare and expensive, still goes under the name of "cotton." Another sort is reliably reported to come from a tall flowering grass called flax. Of course, this was long before modern research gave us spun quartz which affords such luster to the garments in milady's wardrobe.

One example, fully an ell square, is marked "bandana." It was dyed with turkey red and served as a part of the wearing apparel affected chiefly by men called cowboys, who are said to have been engaged in watching four-footed horned beasts eat grass.

How and why were these cloths employed? Well, the truth must out—for the toilet of the nose! After much patient delving into musty files certain facts have come to light which cannot fail to shock our sense of propriety. Our grandparents must have followed some vulgar customs. They carried these things within their clothing or in small lether wallets ready for application to the nasal orifices. Tradition has it that after gathering up mucus discharges the fabrics were carefully folded and returned to the pockets or satchels of their owners. In the event that some fresh irritation within the air passages produced a flow of mucus, out would come these microbe-laden affairs.

An exhibit of old time pictures of pedestrians sauntering down 5th avenue shows these bits of lawn tucked into waistbands, sleeves, or peeking from slits made in gentlemen's coats. The statement is vouched for on good authority that they were waved gayly when in company as an expression of enthusiasm or approval and the merits of their lace edgings were discussed with animation at tea parties.

Of course, that was long before the time when soft paper squares—which are now utilized to absorb secretions and which are burned or otherwise destroyed—came into vogue. In those days people apparently were addicted to the habit of blowing the nose with vigor. Many years were to pass before it was learned that such a practice was likely to force infection into the sinuses. We understand now that if the openings are adequate and unblocked these spaces drain naturally because of normal breathing—the passing of currents of air across the exits of ducts creating a partial vacuum.

How our benighted ancestors could have considered the handkerchief as a sanitary device scarcely can be understood. It is reported that their cuspidor function was abandoned about the year 1960 when it was found that each bit of cloth harbored billions of germs—that is, by the end of the day. The very handling of them obviously contaminated the fingers of their owners and thus bacteria were no doubt transferred to many parts of the body.

Well may we congratulate ourselves that we are living in the middle of the twenty-first century, enjoying the blessings and comforts which have come with scientific progress. Witness the evolution of the handkerchief. We now use material derived from the trees of the forests.

Come again soon—but come without a cold. I believe I have caught one.

Your devoted aunt,
GLADYS H. B.

P. S.: Prof. Stanislaus, of the university, tells me that a "sure-fire" vaccine against colds is about to be announced. They have traced the virus successively from the gadfly to the type louse, thence to the chinch bug. G.

SPLINTERS IN MOUTH.

A. J. L. writes: Two weeks ago I had eleven teeth removed. There are splinters of bone in my gums which the dentist states are from the jaw and I will have to wait until they work out or loosen considerably before he can remove them.

1. Is this dangerous? The teeth broke badly on removal and my gums are sore around those splinters.
2. He says it will be five months before I can get plates?
3. Is it usual for the jaw to splinter when teeth are pulled?

REPLY.

1. Allowing the splinters to remain in the gums until they can be efficiently extracted is not dangerous.
2. It will take a long time for your wounded tissues to heal and—until they do—plates cannot be worn.
3. If teeth are badly diseased they may break during extraction.

CHEW THEM WELL.

P. S. writes: Do roasted chestnuts have any harmful effects if eaten after meals?

REPLY.

Chestnuts have about the same food value as other nuts. They are easily digested when roasted, but owing to their high fat content should not be used in large quantities. They should be well chewed. Some people are so fond of nuts that they fail to masticate them thoroughly, swallowing fairly large bits. Then comes stomach ache or acute indigestion.

PRINTERS.

S. L. E. writes: Is it true that printers sooner or later develop lead poisoning?

REPLY.

Lead poisoning in the printing trades during recent years is of relatively minor importance. Commendable progress has been made in industrial hygiene in these establishments. Even though exposure exists, the occurrence of lead poisoning depends on individual physical resistance, as some persons are more sensitive than others.

FOR DOCTOR TO DECIDE.

Ordinarily, general anesthetics are not dangerous for those with a heart murmur, but this is an individual question which must be decided by the attending physician. The condition of the heart muscle

LONDON—Several thousand Hindus living in London are to get their own Hindu temple early in 1938 through a gift of funds from the maharajah of Tripura.

Two years ago a young Hindu monk came to London from Calcutta and was shocked to find that, although London had two mosques for Mohammedans, shrines for Sikhs and Buddhists, and churches for all the many branches of the Christian religion, there was no Hindu temple.

With the aid of the maharajah of Tripura, a young Indian ruler noted for his devotion to the Hindu religion, the temple is now getting under way. It will be known as "the abode of Vishnu."

Vishnu is a member of the Hindu trinity, but is considered by many Hindus as the greatest of its members. He is generally represented with four arms and riding on the Garuda—half man and half bird.

He is believed by his worshipers to have descended many times to earth in various incarnations and is considered more or less the god of life or nature.

A marble image of Vishnu is being brought from Jaipur and is to be consecrated with elaborate ceremony before it is installed in the temple.

Services will begin daily at 6 a. m. when the temple is finished. The monk in charge will start the day by washing the image carefully, then the lamps will be lighted, flowers strewn over the god and sandalwood paste rubbed on his forehead.

Four times during the day offerings of rice and fruit will be made, while vedic hymns are sung to the accompaniment of cymbals, bells, drums, and flutes.

PROBATE OF ESTATE.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Legal Friend of the People.]—My father passed away in July [mother having died six years ago] and left property and naming a cousin as administrator. I have a sister and brother and father mentioned that his property be equally divided between the three, naming each one.

1. Does this property have to be probated?
2. Could the named administrator sign his insurance paper so the bills could be paid? He would not do it and bills have not been paid.
3. He had a box in a vault and I was co-renter with my father. The administrator said it could not be opened until he was appointed administrator. At the bank they told me they would check what was in the box and send a record to Springfield after which I could have the contents. Is this correct?
4. Two grandsons were left small amounts from father's insurance money [each named in the will] to be safely invested until they reach the age of 25. Can the parents of each be guardians of this money?
5. Father left a half acre at a summer resort in Michigan. What has to be done with this?
6. The three children and two grandsons received notices from the court. It is to come up in October. Do we all have to go there as the children would have to miss school?
7. Do the signers of the will have to go to court?
8. One of them is now living in California. What would be done about that?

C. C.

1. Probate is necessary in order to produce a readily salable title for the real estate.
2. We do not understand what insurance paper you mean.
3. We assume that what the bank officials meant was that they would have an inheritance tax examination, after which you would have access to the box if an inheritance tax release was obtained. We would agree with this.
4. Yes.
5. It probably will be advisable to file there an exemplified record of the proceedings here.
6. No.
7. Yes, if they are available.

DUCKS.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—For the past few weeks THE TRIBUNE has carried a column each day devoted to the grunts and groans of a few dissatisfied club owners and commercial guides who are very much offended since a law was passed to stop the slaughter of ducks over feeding pens. In today's TRIBUNE a self-styled duck hunter claims there were plenty of ducks this fall, but on account of no feeding pens being allowed he failed to get his limit every day. Shooting ducks over a duck pen, well supplied with live decoys and shelled corn, is about as much sport as paying a farmer to let you stand in his chicken yard and shoot his chickens, and requires about the same amount of skill.

I have hunted ducks on the Illinois river from Peoria to the mouth of the river when all you had to do was make yourself a blind and you usually got plenty of ducks, but a few years ago that was all changed. A few well to do "sportsmen" decided they would hog all the duck shooting for themselves, and a few others who could afford to pay from $15 to $20 a day for shooting privileges. Today you can hardly find a spot on the entire river where you can enjoy a day's shooting without paying from $15 a day on up for the privilege.

Now some of the larger duck clubs say they will have to fold up unless the feeding restrictions are changed. It will certainly be a good thing for the ducks and the majority of duck hunters when these slaughter clubs all fold up. Then a hunter of moderate means can go down on the river, get himself a few ducks, and not be at the mercy of some club owner, who, because he owns or leases a few hundred acres of swamp land, imagines he controls the entire duck flight.

If these feed pen duck hogs would try shooting a few singles instead of trying to get the limit in one shot while they are feeding, they would have more real sport, still get the limit, and would really enjoy their time spent in the blind. In other words, there's a lot to duck hunting besides the amount of ducks killed. C. E. E.

WHY NOT ASK MR. BORAH?

River Forest, Ill., Dec. 28.—What does "private interests" mean? Who or what are they? Senator Borah is quoted as saying "The home building bill, and all other measures designed to help the poorer people, will bring very little relief so long as private interests fix prices."

Does this include labor unions who fix prices so high that nobody can build a house? C.

MR. LANDON'S TELEGRAM.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 23.—In the telegram which Alfred M. Landon sent to President Roosevelt I read nothing that would warrant the conclusion that the former intended to convey the impression that he was speaking for the millions of citizens who voted for him in the last election. As I recall it, he was merely expressing his own personal support of the President in the "crisis" with Japan.

It now seems that through the devious low levels to which our national leadership has recently fallen the impression has been allowed to go abroad that Mr. Landon has spoken for the millions of us who voted for him; that we, too, will stand for anything our government may do beyond the shores of our own country and that we approve of this constant meddling with the affairs of other nations and participation in these strip poker games of diplomacy in which Uncle Sam always gets stripped.

To correct this impression, about a dozen of my friends and myself have mailed a letter to the President. We have also mailed a copy to our representatives in congress. I wish many more citizens would do likewise.

DECEMBER ALONG THE DES PLAINES.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—By action of the board of directors this organization wishes to offer a word of appreciation and commendation for the delightful descriptive article of December along the Des Plaines, "December Snow," by Beatrice D. Such articles add to a greater appreciation of our native scenery and your paper is to be thanked for bringing them to the attention of the public.

SUGGESTION.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 29.—If the administration's spokesmen, from the highest to lowest, would keep their mouths shut for the next few years and quit talking about big business being on a strike, business would be all right for all of us. The curse in this country is too many cheap politicians and one horse attorneys working for the government. If it were not for big business Mr. Roosevelt, Jackson, or Cummings would not have a job. I don't own a share of stock in any corporation, but they make me a living.

Many Families Will Welcome Friends Today

BY JUDITH CASS.

HAPPY New Year! Not an original but a hearty and sincere wish. May 1938 bring to each and every one of our readers good health, prosperity, contentment, and peace!

Everywhere in Chicago today the same wish will be expressed, in mansions and in tiny apartments; some will drink to the New Year in eggnog, others will find hot Tom and Jerries the appropriate beverage with which to toast the infant 1938, and still others will celebrate the start of another year by drinking nothing stronger than tomato or orange juice. And it won't be because they are all teetotalers that many will drink these soft drinks!

The pleasant old custom of keeping open house almost died out some years ago, but during the last decade it has been returning to favor with vim and vigor, and today in town and in the country there will be dozens and dozens of houses and apartments with front doors ajar and warm hospitality awaiting those who cross the thresholds.

Kellogg Fairbanks Will Omit Party.

One of Chicago's most hospitable homes, that of Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, in North State street, that customarily is the scene of merry New Year's day parties, will not house one today, however, for Mrs. Fairbank decided not to give the usual buffet luncheon.

Young Mr. and Mrs. "Kelly" Fairbank are spending the week-end at The Butternuts, the Fairbank country home at Lake Geneva. With them are her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Harvey, who are here from Kansas City for the holidays; the junior Byron Harveys, Miss Nancy Freund and an escort, and Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings.

Monroes to Hold 26th at Home.

For the 26th year Mr. and Mrs. William Stanton Monroe will be at home in their Elm street apartment today from 4 to 7 o'clock. The Edward H. Bennetts are having the last of their famous New Year's day parties in their Burton place home, for they have sold the house and henceforth will live the year around in Lake Forest. For some years they have served eggnog to a large group of friends from 12 to 2 o'clock on the first day of every year.

The Robert M. Hutchinses will receive from 4 to 6 o'clock at their home on the south side. Their guests will be the faculty and administrative officers of the University of Chicago, of which Mr. Hutchins is president. Wives of the administrative officers will assist Mrs. Hutchins, who originated the New Year's day reception in 1932.

Clubs Will Hold Annual Parties.

The Chicago club, as usual, will have a luncheon today that will not be missed by any member if he is in town and able to leave his home. On that day the members annually have their luncheon in the dining room instead of in their clubs within a club, and the party always is one of the highlights of the holiday season.

The University club, too, is famous for its New Year's day party, but it is a reception from 3 to 6 o'clock. Each member is privileged to invite one guest and invitations to this annual affair are highly prized. The club's Fish House punch and eggnog recipes are famed from coast to coast.

Last year and in other years the William M. Scudders have served eggnog at noon and then when Mr. Scudder and the other men left for the Chicago club Mrs. Scudder has given a luncheon party for the "deserted" wives. This year, however, the Scudders are not giving such a party.

Fentress Family to Greet Friends.

Almost the entire family of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress—and it is a large family—will be on hand to receive from 5 to 7 o'clock today at the Fentresses' annual at home. The Paul Fentresses, who spent Christmas here, have returned to their home in New York, and Dr. and Mrs. Burwell Dodd [Mary Fentress] did not come from their home in Baltimore for the holidays.

Assisting their parents will be Dr. Thomas L. Fentress and his wife, Calvin Jr. and his wife, young Jamie, the former Harriet Fentress and her husband, Bruce Benson, and the former Emily Fentress and her husband, John Nash Ott Jr.

The David McDougals and the "Mac" Stones have cards out for their annual New Year's day at home, to be held this year at the Stones' new house, Stonewood, in Wayne. The families will receive and dispense Tom and Jerries from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Admiral and Mrs. Ellis Will Hold Reception.

Admiral and Mrs. Hayne Ellis will receive in their home at the Great Lakes Naval Training station from 4 to 6 o'clock today.

One of the Lake Forest houses where hospitality will be dispensed between 4 and 7 is the attractive home in Westminster road of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Hodges.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Catton Rich are giving their annual New Year's day eggnog party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry MacDowell will be at home at 1500 Lake Shore drive.

Miss Anne Tracy has invited a group of her friends to drop in at her home, 191 East Walton place, for

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Look back on the fashion parade. Remember the plague of butterflies that descended on head, dress, belt, and footgear. Nothing escaped! Remember the rise of the hat. By winter we all wore creations that reached record heights, causing consternation to man and beast. And the veils. Starting out with scraps of nose ticklers, these ended in yards of the stuff that got into everything from soup to sour paragraphs about our apparent lack of restraint. We literally choked on mesh dots and embroidery.

It was the year we darn near sunk the summer millinery business when we wore headache bands for hats. Anybody with a foot of material, a needle, or a couple of pins could run one up in the morning . . . the result, we all looked alike, homemade and ordinary.

We wore footgear with an appalling amount of flesh showing, while irate gentlemen held forth on the unloveliness of too many toes in the open, and the medical profession wondered about pneumonia. But, as usual, we didn't succumb; a new fashion arrived before we suffered anything but derision.

It was a record year for the girdle and corset business. After we had our chest discovered for us, we no longer strove to maintain a string-bean silhouette. We wanted dresses that looked like they had been plastered on, and received encouragement from the masculine half of the world.

We learned to go feminine, to wear afternoon dresses, and eschewed mantailored suits. This was followed by the circus parade glitters, clothes covered with sequins, paillettes, rhinestones, and colored cellophane, anything that would shine and blind the spectators.

We went balmy over buttons of every conceivable color and material; brilliantly nuts over gadgets and pins, wearing on our long suffering chest such trivia as bugs, varmints, fat pulpy gold cupids, metal pin cushions, leering carved faces, evil looking swords, hands that clanked as we walked. We loaded ourselves to the eyebrows with hardware masquerading as costume jewelry.

Who says we have no sense of humor? What man could survive that dizzy whirl of changing fashion and wait eagerly for 1938 to strut its stuff!

Arthur Meeker Quits Post as Chairman of Assembly Governors

At a meeting of the board of governors of the Assemblies yesterday Arthur Meeker resigned as chairman. For more than 30 years Mr. Meeker has headed the organization that has given the most exclusive balls of each season and he now feels that it is time for some younger man to take over the duties. Mr. Meeker was unable to attend the meeting and sent his resignation in a letter. No successor was named. Mr. Meeker will continue as a governor and so will Morris Leidy Johnston, the only other governor who has been a member of the group for anywhere near as long a time as Mr. Meeker.

Like Former Era

Prairie avenue, which used to be the destination of Friday afternoon concert goers in the days when carriages called for them, again was the destination of many as they left Orchestra hall in motor cars yesterday. In the house at 1638 Prairie avenue, where Mrs. Robert B. Gregory has lived for 58 years, this distinguished Chicagoan was introducing to society her granddaughter, Miss Adelaide Sweetser.

From 4:30 o'clock until 7 Mrs. Gregory and the lovely young débutante received many old friends, all of them sorry that Miss Sweetser's mother, the former Ruth Gregory, and her husband, Arthur Sweetser, had not been able to come from their faraway home in Geneva, Switzerland, for the affair.

Miss Sweetser, who is studying at Sarah Lawrence college in Bronxville, N. Y., was the traditional débutante—as pretty as any who ever bowed in Chicago—in bouffant white tulle with a large colonial bouquet. Her grandmother, patrician and charming, wore black velvet and carried a small colonial bouquet. So did the eight assistants, all third or fourth generation Chicagoans. They were the Misses Nancy Blaine, Josephine Zeiss, Eleanor McClurg, Mary Gardner, Betty Armour, Kay Goodman, Janet Gregory, and Mary Paul Welling.

Mrs. Gregory has lived in the Prairie avenue house ever since she went there as a bride, and before that, as Adelaide Hibbard, she had resided across the street, so she always has lived in the near south side neighborhood which used to be Chicago's Gold Coast.

The Housewife

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

At this festive time of year when friends drop in for Sunday night suppers a special glass plate designed for the occasion comes in handy. We've seen round plates for sandwiches, snacks, and what have you, but we've never seen one this size. It's enormous. And it's good looking, too, with scalloped edges, and in the center of the glass a design of bunches of grapes which appears to be in low relief.

BY CECIL SMITH.

Over at the Civic Opera house New Year's eve was observed with a composite evening consisting of a special Chicago City Opera company performance of "Martha," followed by wining and dining on the mezzanine floor and dancing in the main foyer to the strains of wholly unoperatic music.

Helen Jepson and Tito Schipa returned to the city to sing the chief soprano and tenor rôles in Flotow's tuneful, lighthearted opera. May Barron, Giacomo Rimini, and Vittorio Trevisan completed the list of principals.

All the singers on the stage seemed to be glad to help the audience, which was of generous proportions, pass the early part of the evening with a minimum of boredom and a minimum of premature excitement. I have never heard a performance more difficult to review with full professional consideration, for nothing bad happened, and neither did anything good.

Mr. Schipa repeated his "M'Appari" aria, but the repetition was carried off like something foreordained by the management to give an air of calculated festivity to the proceedings. At least Mr. Schipa's entire contribution to the performance scarcely merited any ovation, for he sang with a singular absence of smooth line and with a quality of strained sentimentality that has been growing upon him in recent years.

Miss Jepson sang the title rôle in half voice, without either the pungency of accent or the aristocracy of style to make such light singing interesting. Of all the principal singers, only Mr. Rimini and Mr. Trevisan displayed any sense of humor, and "Martha" is, when all is said and done, a comic opera.

Mrs. McLean Gives Her New Year's Eve Party for 600 Guests

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The great estate Friendship was one of the capital's brightest spots tonight, for Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, owner of the Hope diamond, was given her annual New Year's eve party.

Bearers of 600 noted names gathered from up and down the Atlantic seaboard for the dinner and entertainment. Mrs. McLean had reserved hotel suites for the out-of-towners, placed cars at their disposal, ordered both Hal Kemp from the west coast and Meyer Davis from New York to play at her home, and prepared to greet the dawn with breakfast.

The celebration is a 30-year-old custom in her family, inherited from her parents, the copper-rich John Walshes, and her parents-in-law, the McLeans, of publisher fame. She received with her daughter, Evalyn, and her son, Jock. Her second son, Edward, was kept from the party by illness.

Her guests were typical of her varied friendships: Joseph Hergesheimer, the novelist, and his wife; the Myron Taylors [United States Steel], the Goodhue Livingston Jrs. [New York social figures], Pierre Cartier [the New York jeweler, who has negotiated for many of the famous jewels she has worn], the Henry Fletchers [Republicans], and the Homer S. Cummingses [Democratic attorney general].

Marion Bard Is Engaged to J. H. McMahon

One of the first engagements to be announced in 1938 was made known at a gathering of young people last night in the Highland Park home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis N. Bard. It was the engagement of the Bards' second daughter, Marion, to James H. McMahon Jr., son of Mrs. James H. McMahon and the late Mr. McMahon, Bronxville, N. Y.

The engagement did not come as a surprise to the young friends of Miss Bard and her fiancé, who has been here since Monday, for he has been a constant suitor of pretty Miss Bard for several years.

After the announcement was made at midnight Miss Bard, Mr. McMahon and her guests went on to the dance at the Exmoor County club.

Miss Bard was graduated from Sarah Lawrence college last June. Mr. McMahon is a graduate of the Canterbury school in New Milford, Conn., and attended Williams college. The wedding will take place in the early summer. Miss Bard's older sister, Dorothy, was married to Joshua D. Derry in October, 1936.

The New Year's day reception that John R. Leonard and his family hold each yer at their home, Wildacre, Winnetka, is of especial significance today, for it is to serve also as the wedding reception of Miss Harriet Leonard and William Adilor Turpin, who are being married at 4:30 o'clock at Christ church, Winnetka.

The bride is to wear her mother's wedding gown, the same gown in which her sister, Deborah, was married to Dr. Frode Jensen. Mrs. Jensen will be her sister's matron of honor and Miss Helen Chapman will be the maid of honor.

Harrison James Carter of New York will be Mr. Turpin's best man, and ushering will be a brother, D. John Turpin of Indianapolis; Edward Carter, Dr. Jensen, Daniel Leonard, Harold Waller and Arthur G. Leonard of Wilmington, Ill., a cousin of the bride. Mr. Turpin and his bride will live in Indianapolis.

Another New Year's reception that is to be a wedding reception is the one Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Poole will give at home in Lake Forest at 5 o'clock for their daughter, Nancy, and her bridegroom, Joseph E. Rich, son of Mrs. R. Joseph Rich of Winnetka.

The wedding of Miss Poole to Mr. Rich will take place at 4:30 o'clock, also at the Poole home, with only the immediate families present. Miss Poole's sister, Mrs. J. Murray Washburn Jr., will be the matron of honor, and Miss Bette Rich, the bridegroom's sister, will be the maid of honor. The bride will wear her mother's wedding dress, as the former Barbara Poole did at her wedding to Mr. Washburn.

Although the wedding is a small one, Miss Poole is to have a large number of attendants. The bridegroom's schoolgirl sister, Peggy Rich; Miss Mary Wood, Miss Nancy Ryerson, Miss Ethel Johnston, Mrs. F. John Bersbach, Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes Jr., Mrs. Robert S. Macdonald, Mrs. Thomas Morgan Schriber [Betty Brooks], Mrs. Stanley Washburne of New York, Miss Harriet Kelly of Providence, R. I., Miss Winifred Wylie of New York and Miss Louise Mead of Dayton, O., will be the bridesmaids.

An equally large group of young men will be Mr. Rich's ushers. Frederick P. Hamilton Jr. of Omaha is to be the best man.

A wedding in Bronxville, N. Y., today is of interest in Chicago because the bride and her parents used to live here. Miss Jean Anderson Seagrove, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kay Seagrove, will become the bride of Carl Nicholas Dunn. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will live in Fort Myers, Fla., in the winters and in Warrenton, Va., in the summers.

One of Miss Seagrove's eight attendants will be her cousin, Miss Barbara Morse, daughter of the Milton Morses of Lake Forest. Miss Morse will leave the east tomorrow to return to Colorado Springs, where she is teaching tennis and riding at the San Luis school and taking an English course at Colorado college. Miss Seagrove's great uncle, Heman H. Field, is another Chicagoan in Bronxville for the wedding.

Announcement is made of the marriage on Dec. 26 in Valparaiso, Ind., of Mrs. Guy de Chadenedes to William Pickman Fay. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Olsen of New York. Mr. Fay, son of Mrs. George Barr McCutcheon, is a graduate of Harvard, and was a captain of field artillery during the world war. He and his bride are postponing a honeymoon trip until later, and are at home in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gates Forrest of Winnetka announce the engagement of their daughter, Jean, to Wallace M. Mulliken, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mulliken of Champaign, Ill.

Miss Forrest attended Denison and Northwestern universities. Mr. Mulliken is a graduate of the law school of the University of Illinois. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Dr. and Mrs. George Abelio of 805 Junior terrace announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Eleanor Jewell, to William I. Freimuth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Freimuth of Duluth. The wedding will take place tonight at the Belmont hotel.

Bright Frock for New Year

FROCKS IN JUNIOR SIZES.

Why not start the new year with a sprightly new frock? It's a good resolution and one which your overworked wardrobe will appreciate, now that the long season has given most of your dresses a great deal of wear. This frock is designed for young women who wear junior sizes, and it caters to the svelte figure. All its details are youthful. The square neckline and girdled waistline employ lacings for color contrast and quaintness. The sleeves are puffed, while the bodice is severely plain. Below the snugly fitted waist is a flared skirt, always youthful.

Both plain shades and prints will make up effectively in this model, and it's a grand dress for which to use gay shades. This frock is pretty enough for parties and practical enough for every day wear.

Style No. 3436 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, and 19 years. Size 15 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material, with 3½ yards of ribbon.

Happy New Year!

It's a mythological farce with music; cunningly and elaborately produced and brilliantly acted. The dialog is delightful and the treatment of risque scenes the acme of directorial cleverness.

The locales are ancient Thebes and Mount Olympus. The principal characters are Jupiter; Juno, his wife; Mercury; Amphytrion, a general in the Greek army; his beautiful and virtuous wife, Alcmene; her handmaiden, Myrmismis, and Myrismis' husband, Amphytrion's servant. . . .

Alcmene's prayers for Thebian victory and the safe return of her adored spouse intrigue Jupiter, for Jupiter is a gay old god with lusty appreciation of the red lips and well turned ankles of earth women . . . He decides to visit Thebes and conquer Alcmene. . . . Juno believes he intends to take a rheumatism cure at Sparta. . . .

So—Jupiter and Mercury mount a parachute and, shortly, are in Thebes.

Not wotting that the fresh old bird with the doggy eye who tries to pick her up on a street corner is her revered Jupiter, Alcmene gives him a good talking to and sends him on his way. Jupiter, convinced that she has thought for none but hubby, takes on the likeness of Amphytrion. . . . As Juno remarks later, the old fool was always doing something like that—"he turned himself into a swan for Leda and into a bull for Europa. . . ." Mercury impersonates Amphytrion's man Friday. . . .

Resultant occurrences provide mirth provoking entertainment of the most unexpected and satisfying kind. . . . I got a great kick out of Juno's activities and conversation after a glance down at earth through her revealing glass convinced her that her naughty goddie never went to Sparta. . . .

The film is an adaptation of the play featuring Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt. The latter must have suited them admirably, but no better, I imagine, than the screen version does Jeanne Boitel, Henri Garat, et al. . . . As to that "et al" there are, I am sure, thousands of extras in the supporting cast.

DON'T miss "Amphytrion"!

Oracled Hays not so many years ago: "Nearly any unprejudiced student will say that the best acting in the theater today is to be found in motion pictures. Not only the stars but the player who has the smallest bit are actors in the fullest sense of the word. Unlike the stage actor, the actors of the screen cast their spell by ACTION, not by words or a beautiful voice." And now look at the darned things, Will!

Prettiest sight out here, the mountains covered with snow, visible sixty miles away. . . . Girl with the most gorgeous coloring, Virginia Bruce. . . . Most genuine of the celebs, Spencer Tracy, Joel McCrea, and Loretta Young. . . . Canniest business women in the flicker colony, Connie Bennett, Jeanette MacDonald, and Claudette Colbert. . . . Littlest guy with the most energy, Eddie Cantor. . . . Oddest coincidence: That Myrna Loy and Gary Cooper were both born in Helena, Mont.

Girl with the most unusual voice tones, Jean Arthur. . . . Most gorgeous newcomer to films, Ilona Massey. . . . Most boyish of the stars, Clark Gable. . . . Comic who works more than any other, Edward Everett Horton [don't look now, but I'll bet he's in that picture]. . . . Producer with the best 1937 record, [1] Zanuck, [2] David Selznick, [3] Brynie Foy.

Star who enjoyed the greatest 1937 comeback, Janet Gaynor. . . . Individual performance I enjoyed most, Fredric March in "Nothing Sacred,"

Most interesting interview of the year, to me at least, that one with Katharine Hepburn, in which she told more about her Broadway flops than about her successes. . . . Most exciting Hollywood party, that which Hal Roach gave to young Mussolini. . . . Rendered more exciting because of its repercussions. . . . Noisiest première of the season, "Hurricane." . . . Most disappointing première, "Tovarich."

Best news of the year, that Nate Blumberg had been appointed president of Universal. . . . He's an old friend of mine. . . . Costliest picture, Garbo's "Conquest." . . . Girl who gained the greatest personal laurels, Carole Lombard. . . . Youngster who won the greatest comment, Deanna Durbin.

Most boring columns of the year, the daily two column discussions in Los Angeles papers about the fate of Howard Jones at U. S. C. . . . It got so bad that most of us refused to read the sporting pages. . . . Finest photography, that in "Wells Fargo" and "Hurricane." . . . There was one shot of Frances Dee in "Wells Fargo" that was the most gorgeous portrait I've ever seen. . . . Most sensational box office draw of 1937, Sonja Henie.

Most popular Hollywood game, [1] Famous Quotations acted out in pantomime; [2] the D-O-U-S game played out in this column [finding words that ended in those four letters]. . . . Gilbert Roland and Groucho Marx originated it. . . . Girl with the most Hollywood beaux, Dixie Dunbar. . . . Best running gag of the year, the discussion about the girl who'll play Scarlett O'Hara. . . . Greatest directors of 1937, Victor Fleming, Leo McCarey, and Greg La Cava, though not necessarily in that order.

Biggest surprise of the Hollywood twelvemonth, "Alcatraz" and "Navy Blue and Gold," two B's that were grade A at the box office. . . . I think that the latter is the finest college picture ever filmed. . . . Most startling performance of the season, Ginger Rogers' unsuspected histrionics in "Stage Door." . . . We all thought she was just a hoofer. . . . Nicest gesture of the year, that of Fred Astaire in air mailing the N. Y. reviews of "Damsel in Distress" to Burns and Allen. . . . B. and A. ran away with the notices, and nobody was happier about their success than Astaire.

Most serious Hollywood dresser, Adolphe Menjou. . . . Most charitable woman out here, Mrs. Anne Lehr. . . . Dance rage on the west coast, "The Big Apple." . . . New York stage shows that attracted greatest comment out here, George M. Cohan's performance in "I'd Rather Be Right," "Of Mice and Men," and Al Shean's big time click in "Father Malachy's Miracle." . . . Screen newcomer with the greatest prospect of permanent success, Wayne Morris.

RUN!

By Patricia Wentworth

[Copyright: 1938: By Patricia Wentworth Turnbull.]

SYNOPSIS.

Delivering a new car to a customer James Elliot, lost in the fog, finds himself on some one's estate. Groping his way to the dark house, he stumbles over a bicycle. The front door is ajar. Entering, his flashlight reveals a girl, who commands him to "Run!" A shot whistles after them as they flee to hide in the hayloft. The girl tells James she was searching for a necklace her dying Aunt Clementa had told her was hidden in the house, called Rere place. The girl vanishes before James can learn more. At his cousin Daphne's party James meets the girl. She is Sally West, the sister of his college chum, Jocko West. She hints of danger to him—because of what he saw—her brother, and herself. Jackson, a rival salesman, takes credit for driving the car the night of the fog and is run over on the road and killed. Sally is in fear of Ambrose Sylvester, the novelist, who is her guardian and was her aunt's trustee; also his wife, Hildegarde, and the latter's cousin, Henri Niemeyer, who wants to marry Sally. Jocko, after receiving a letter from his dying aunt, was pushed off a cliff. After the accident the letter is missing and Jocko cannot remember its contents. The money Sally's aunt left to Jocko comes next to her, and, if she dies, to Ambrose. Sally and James fall in love, but she tells him it is too dangerous for them to meet. Returning home one night James barely escapes death from falling scaffolding. On his way to deliver a car James offers to drive Sally to Rere place, where Jocko is staying. A driverless motor lorry nearly smashes into them.

INSTALMENT XXXVI.

IN THE GHOST HOUSE.

As James drove away Jocko West's red eyebrows went up. His eyes, nearly as green as Sally's, sparkled interrogatively.

"Pretty sure of himself, our James—what?"

Sally said nothing. Her color was bright.

"Pretty sure of you?" pursued Jocko.

Sally made up her mind suddenly.

"Quite, quite sure of me."

"O, he is, is he? And what about you? Are you quite, quite sure of him?"

Sally permitted herself a modest smile.

"O, I think so."

"Are you giving it out—telling the world—telling our kind guardian, and his kind wife, and our dear Henri?"

Sally lost all her bright color.

Jocko whistled, looked critically at Sally for a moment, clapped her on the shoulder, and remarked that he was all for letting sleeping dogs lie.

James did not get back till 5 o'clock. As he turned in at the gate and drove up between the neglected overhanging trees he saw the whole front of the house like a black cliff with no light showing. The Georgian front ran to windows—rows of them—but there wasn't a lighted one among the lot.

As he went up the steps his heart went down. It went as heavy as lead inside him and sank with every step he mounted.

He tugged at the iron bell-pull, after which he applied himself to the knocker. Nothing happened. He banged on the door, and all of a sudden Jocko West opened it. He held up a guttering candle.

"In a bit of a hurry, aren't you?" he said.

"Yes," said James.

"Thought the wicked guardian had spirited us away or bricked us up in one of the cellars? I believe you did. Well, well—what it is to be in love! Sally's been in the same sort of flap about you."

"I haven't!" said Sally, coming up out of the black depths of the hall with a candle of her own. Its yellow light made very little impression on the gloomy paneling and the dark stair with its huge newel posts and heavy carved balustrades.

The eighteenth century ended as you came into the hall. It ran up two stories high and its panels were patterned with the Tudor rose and Rere bats. Over the enormous fireplace a coat of arms showed black and silver in the candlelight—three bats sable on a field argent, and the motto, "I kepe the rere."

"The motto dates from some little battle in the French wars. Gilbert Rere kept a bridge with his sword until his men could take up the position he wanted on a hill above the river. Those medieval people did love puns."

Jocko West shut the hall door and came over to them.

"Council of war," he said. "As all the rooms this side are about forty feet long, I suggest the butler's pantry. It's cosier, and the candles will really light it. If you're staying you shall have our best haunted room—the one Giles Rere slept in the night he shot his brother. By the way, are you staying?"

"I can," said James. "But I think we had better all clear out and go to a pub. I don't quite see what good we're going to do here. I don't want to be rude, J. J., but I can't see any point in staying here without light, or food, or fires, or beds."

"Lashins of beds," said Jocko.

"Wringing wet!" said Sally.

Jocko took each of them by an arm.

"Eschew the fleshpots, my children. Life is real, life is earnest. Candles were good enough for Gilbert, and Giles, and the Headless Lady, and they've got to be good enough for the likes of us. And in my butler's pantry you will find a nice little oil stove. It's smelling to heaven because I spilt oil all over it."

They proceeded through a swing door at the back of the hall. The smell of warm oil surged to meet them.

"I couldn't get away before," said James. "Col. Pomeroy knows my people and he wanted to talk. He couldn't make up his mind whether to send the car back to be gone over or not. In the end he let me take her. It took time to persuade him."

"Here we are," said Jocko, holding up his candle. "Here's my pantry."

It was a good sized room, the walls lined with shelves and presses, the floor flagged with stone. The stove contended valiantly with the surrounding cold. The whole place was very cold. The closing of the door set a chill draught moving.

Sally shivered.

"I don't know what you call cozy, Jocko. Is there anything to sit on?" said Sally.

"That chair has only three legs. You can have it, my child—you're the lightest. The Windsor chair for James, and ye olde oake table for me."

Sally rejected the three-legged chair and swung herself on the table beside him.

"Well?" said James.

"I don't know what you mean by 'Well?'" said Jocko West. "Sally's been telling me a steepish sort of yarn."

"What has Sally told you?"

Jocko put up a long, bony hand and ticked off the items finger by finger.

"One, she says you were fired at in this house a fortnight ago. Says there were at least two people here. Thinks the one who fired was Henri." He put up a second finger. "Two, says kind guardian and kind guardian's wife tried to bump me off at Holbrunn last year. Evidence very slight. I was there. They were there. I fell over the cliff. Therefore they pushed me." Another finger went up. "Three, some one asks a Mr. Jackson of Atwells whether he was the driver who had taken a nice car down into Sussex on the twenty-second of January, or some such date. Mr. Jackson incautiously says he was because he is led to believe that there is a lady in the case. After which Mr. Jackson goes to swell the weekly list of casualties on the road. Again no evidence, but the female mind opines that the unfortunate Jackson was lured away and run over because it was thought that the driver of the car might have seen something which he wasn't meant to see."

"The people behind all this don't leave much evidence lying about," said James.

Jocko nodded and put up another finger.

"Four, some one tips bricks off a roof onto our James. Five, some one runs an empty lorry down a steep hill at our James. It does look a bit as if some one was annoyed with him, doesn't it?"

GASOLINE ALLEY—THE POST MORTEM

Learn to Enjoy Company of Your Children

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

Once I tried to sum up all that we who are parents want to be and do in our relation to our children. This summing up took the form of a litany for mothers and fathers. Some of you are familiar with it.

But I noticed in reading it over today, one thing that isn't expressed in so many words—and I wish it were. It is something not so very tangible and it may even sound trivial to you, or like a sort of unnecessary decoration on the useful structure of a fine relationship between mother and child. But it isn't.

The aim that I wish I had expressed in my litany for parents is this:

To enjoy my children,
And find happiness and interest in their society—
May love and understanding help me.

—o—

This is not a trivial or an excess thing. It is vital to a fine warm relationship between a mother and father and their child.

Think for a minute in terms of yourself and another grownup. Doesn't it give you a warm, glowy feeling to be with some one you know enjoys being with you?

Children are that way, too. They sense it when we enjoy them. I don't mean enjoy simply doing things for them, like sewing or cooking or taking them to some sort of party or entertainment. I mean actually enjoy being with them—enjoy them as people.

We love our children, of course, but if we like them too; find real enjoyment in their companionship, find them interesting, we have added something very precious to our love and to the existing relationship.

Children respond to our enjoyment of their society. It gives them a sort of dignity, a real importance as human beings in the family picture. They thrive and mature under it. And what you'll gain—well, I hope you'll find that out for yourself.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

I cannot warn players too emphatically against indiscriminate false-carding. The intelligent play of cards is, in itself, a form of language. Obviously it is one partner's duty to "speak the truth" to the other. Most bridge lies [false cards] are more misleading to partner than to opponents.

But, while false-carding should be confined to those rare situations in which it is not dangerous to "lie" to partner, it is a fact that a judicious false card can be very baffling to the enemy. Consider the declarer's dilemma in the following hand:

NORTH
♠ K 6
♥ J 10 8
♦ Q 7 6 4

WEST
♠ Q 10 7 3
♥ A 9 6 5 2
♦ 2
♣ J 9 7

EAST
♠ 9 5 4 2
♥ 4 2
♦ J 5 5 3

SOUTH
♥ K Q 7
♦ A K 10 9
♣ Q 6 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
5 clubs	Pass	6 clubs	Pass
6 diamonds	Pass	Pass	Pass

After West had opened the ace of hearts and continued with the second round, declarer's only problem was to pick up the trumps without losing to the missing jack. Obviously a three-two split would insure success and, also obviously, the jack, even if it lay thrice guarded, could be picked up if declarer could guess which defender was long.

On winning the second trick with the heart king declarer made the orthodox semi-safety play of laying down the diamond ace, hoping to get some information from the fall of cards that would point out the correct manner of drawing trumps. West, of course, followed to the ace with the deuce. Had East automatically played his lowest trump declarer's natural action would have been to lead the nine toward the queen. Had he done so, of course, the situation would have been revealed and the finesse against East's jack established. East, however, made matters very tough for the declarer by following to the first diamond lead, not with the three, but with the eight spot! This false card was declarer's undoing. Of course, he realized that East might be "fooling." But he could not know and, therefore, could not be criticized for laying down the diamond king as preparation for a finesse against West.

The point was that East had nothing to lose by his false card, and a great deal to gain.

Cooking Editor Makes Annual Resolutions!

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune-]

The year is going, let him go . . ."

They tell me this is the day to turn over a new leaf, to make a set of resolutions about one's behavior for the coming year. So I have made a few resolutions for my kitchen behavior.

First, I am going to plan my menus well ahead of time. Second, I am going to do most of my marketing personally. Third, I shall try hard to keep my cupboard shelves neat all the time. Fourth . . . but all of you have your own resolutions to worry about, so let's turn to a few fine recipes submitted by readers.

From a collection of recipes sent to us by Mrs. Cecile F. Selin, Bessemer, Mich., I have selected these suggestions:

CRUM POTATOES: Peel small potatoes. Roll in melted butter and then in bread crums. Place in buttered pan and bake, basting with butter and milk during cooking. Add chopped parsley just before serving.

CHEESE DREAMS: Make plain cheese sandwiches. Cut in halves and dip each sandwich in beaten egg. Fry as you would French toast and serve with orange marmalade.

Peanut Brittle Dessert.

1 pint whipping cream
1 cup crushed peanut brittle [grind in food chopper]
1 cup marshmallows, cut in pieces
1 teaspoon vanilla
Vanilla wafers
Maraschino cherries

Whip the cream and fold in crushed peanut brittle, marshmallows, and vanilla. Chill. Using three vanilla wafers for each serving, pile cream mixture on wafers and stack them sandwich fashion, topping and surrounding with more of the filling. Garnish with maraschino cherry.

—o—

Those of us who are fortunate enough to possess old fashioned recipes written in grandmother's or great-auntie's own handwriting, will know how Mrs. Earl Carr of Marion, Ind., treasures this heirloom recipe for Aunt Mollie's Vinegar Pie. The recipe is worded as it came to us.

AUNT MOLLIE'S VINEGAR PIE.

3 tablespoons of vinegar [do not weaken]
1 level cupful of sugar
4 level tablespoonsful of flour
1 cupful of water
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon of butter

Mix half the sugar and flour together. Add boiling water gradually and mix to a smooth paste. Cook in a double boiler about 15 minutes, stirring while it cooks. Add the remaining sugar and the beaten yolks and cook about five minutes. Add the butter and the vinegar. A dash of lemon extract adds to the flavor. Cool the mixture and pour in a baked pastry shell. Cover with meringue made of the egg whites, to which four tablespoons of powdered sugar has been added, and brown in a moderate oven.

A masculine reader from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, calls our attention to the fact that lingon berries, those cranberrylike favorites of the Scandinavian peoples, now are in season and available in quite a number of Chicago markets. They are imported from Newfoundland, Norway, and Sweden, packed in barrels of water, and are used in the manner of cranberries. To make a sauce of them simmer two cups of the berries with one-quarter cup water and three-quarters cup sugar for 10 minutes.

Many Families Will Welcome Friends Today

eggnog. Miss Tracey's mother, Mrs. Raymond Redheffer, and Mr. Redheffer are not having their usual party today. Miss Tracy and Joe Redheffer return to Swarthmore college on Monday and young Raymond goes back to the Asheville school the same day.

Many of the debutante set will include a drive to Libertyville in their New Year's afternoon schedule, for Miss Dorothy MacArthur will be at home there in honor of her guest Miss Jean Brown of Englewood, N. J. Miss MacArthur, the Telfer MacArthurs' younger daughter, and Miss Brown are classmates at Smith college.

The Indian Hill club will hold its annual open house from 7 to 10 o'clock. A buffet supper and dancing are on the program.

Family Gathering at Stuart Home.

One of the largest family gatherings today will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Douglas Stuart in Lake Forest. Miss Barbara Edwards, young Robert Douglas Stuart Jr.'s fiancée is visiting them. Mr. and Mrs. George A. MacDonald and their daughter and son-in law, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Franklin Waddell, who are here from their home in Peterboro, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. Laurence S. Killaly, who live in Toronto, will be with the Stuarts for dinner. John Stuart Jr. and his bride of four months arrived yesterday morning to be present at the family gathering.

Tomorrow night Mr. and Mrs. George A. MacDonald will give a small dinner and hocky party for Mr. Stuart and Miss Edwards.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes will give a musical at their home in Evanston this evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Although they are especially busy this season taking part in the debutante festivities, a group of girls have decided to continue the custom they initiated six years ago of giving a ball on New Year's night.

Miss Lorraine Marie Roach, Miss Nancy Leigh Bowes, Miss Franci-Jean Sheridan, Miss Barbara Tennant, and Miss Jean Tennant, Miss Marjorie McDonald, and Miss Jean Sincere will give the ball, for which they have sent out 300 invitations, at the Exmoor Country club.

Subdebutante Set to Have Dance Tonight.

A dance to be given tonight by five young men for their friends in the subdebutante set will be one of the highlights of the holiday season for the younger set. George B. Foster Jr., John D. Galbraith Jr., Richard Grimm, Thomas O'Connell, and Joseph E. Otis III. are the youthful hosts.

They have asked Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Thomasson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. George B. Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Amberg to chaperone the dance, which is to be given at 9 o'clock at the Granada hotel. None of the parents has had anything to do with the arrangements of the party, preceding which there will be several dinner parties, including one Bobby Faurot is giving.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Isham will give a winter sports party tomorrow. They will take about 40 guests to their Lake Geneva home for the day.

Mrs. Walter Sanger Hinchman will give a dinner and treasure hunt tomorrow for her younger sister, Josephine Wallace, who is in her senior year at the North Shore Country Day school. Their brother, Walter F. Wallace Jr., a freshman at Williams, is at home for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Maher will have as their guests this week-end Commander and Mrs. Festus Foster, who arrive today on their way to Commander Foster's new post in San Francisco.

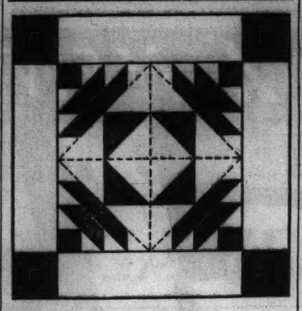
Joe Penner May Wish He Had Kept Duck for Pet

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Joe Penner, the radio and film comedian with the celebrated duck, also owns a dog. And whereas the duck has made him a tidy fortune, the dog might lose him all of $10,200. Penner was sued for this amount today in Superior court by Charlie Paglia, awning mender, who complains that he was bitten by the comedian's dog last Wednesday.

Today's Quilt



Nora's Choice.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Nora's Choice" comes from Massachusetts, the design created by a young girl brought from Ireland at the age of three and who lived with her parents in Lennox until she moved west to Albany, N. Y. It is a most unusual pieced pattern and indicates that much time and attention were devoted to the design. It is not difficult to assemble and the entire quilt is composed of pieced blocks set together with four inch bands of white material between the blocks. The inner border is composed of the outside edges of the blocks and surrounded by a three inch white border and a one-half inch red bias binding.

Turquoise Is Popular and Effective Gem

Because one sees so much turquoise jewelry these days doing its part toward making the costumed woman more effective, it is interesting to learn something of this stone.

Of the turquoise we learn that much of it is mined in the northeastern part of Persia. Ancient mines these are, and still producing. Russia, it appears, has rights to the finest gem turquoise in the world.

For the last quarter of a century quantities of turquoise have been mined in New Mexico, Nevada, Arizona and California. The best of the Mexican stones were guaranteed to keep their color.

It is said that the azure from which the finest stones came have ceased producing. But sophisticated turquoise jewelry, famous in the great fashion centers of the world, harks back to the time of wonderful inlaid ornaments used when ancient Egypt was young. The earliest group of jewelry forms known in the world consists of bracelets of Queen Zer of the first Egyptian dynasty, set with alternate plaques of cast gold and carved turquoise.

The turquoise popularity at the moment probably is due to the fact that it is well suited to combination with gold and silver. American Indian craftsmen have set it in beautifully worked necklaces, bracelets, rings and belts, as those of you appreciate who have followed the Santa Fe trail. To the American Indian the turquoise is the blue of the sky and it is used in the ritualistic festivals of the Navajos.

Lapis [meaning the realization of hopes] is a rich and deep blue flecked with gold, a powerful Egyptian charm at one time. The best of the present day lapis lazuli comes from Siberia, although Afghanistan boasts the oldest and most famous mines. Lapis is considered too soft for a ring stone, but lends itself beautifully to combinations with gold.

Finds BabyBoy in OakPark Tucked in Cardboard Box

Milton C. Rutledge found a baby boy three or four days old tucked inside a cardboard box in his automobile last night near his home at 508 Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park. Rutledge called police for help, and they took the foundling to St. Vincent's orphanage.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Small, specially sized packages are a boon to the woman who likes to experiment—or perhaps has to—until she finds preparations that suit her skin perfectly. They make the experimental process much less expensive.

There's such a box around town now—a sensitive skin treatment that is not only a bargain but contains preparations that, once tried, you will probably fall madly in love with! Especially if winter is hard going for that skin of yours.

You can start the year—and end it—with a soft, well nourished skin if you make the sensitive skin treatment routine yours for 1938. As a cleanser you can use the one you'll find in this box—a milky type cleanser that in itself is a corrective as well as an efficient little grime chaser.

For keeping your skin toned there is a special liquid for dry skin that refreshes and "braces" it without removing a particle of the precious natural oil.

But the big beauty resolution should be to use your texture cream—the cream which has no other purpose than to nourish. It replenishes the oil supply and in the doing serves as a preventer of the lines that are every woman's terror. This should be used religiously by every mature woman whose skin is dry.

Then protection is important, too. And here again the little box is right there with what you need—one of the best foundations you can find anywhere. It's creamy and light and makes a beautiful, lasting, protecting powder base, with none of the obviousness that makes so many women impatient with foundations.

There's even a cream rouge in this little beauty box. The shade is natural, the texture the kind that's easy to apply and very kind to your sensitive skin.

This box of five beauty aids is extremely inexpensive. It's an economical introduction to fine preparations.

ELEANOR NANGLE.

IT'S DAY OF BOWL GAMES; CALIFORNIA MEETS ALABAMA

TWO UNBEATEN TEAMS ATTRACT 90,101 TO DUEL

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Tradition is on the side of Alabama in the twenty-ninth Rose Bowl football game tomorrow as California's Golden Bears attempt the hitherto unaccomplished feat of stopping the Crimson Tide as it sweeps down the Arroyo Seco.

Four times the Tide has poured, in all its rebellious might, into the Bowl and Washington, Washington State and Stanford have had no luck in stemming its relentless surge.

Tomorrow 90,101 will pay approximately $300,000 for the privilege of watching the Golden Bears take up where the others left off. It will be the biggest crowd in the history of the bowl, the biggest gate at present prices and probably one of the best games in the history of these post-season games.

Both at Full Strength.

Both teams are unbeaten. Both are at full strength. Both are outstanding on the offensive. For once in the lengthy history of games between the south and the west, the western team seems fired to heights of flaming spirit equal to that of the always audacious and brilliant invaders.

California, unbeaten but tied by Washington, is a slight favorite over the Alabamans, who haven't lost a game in two seasons of brilliant and hard fought football and who this year have not even been tied.

Just why this should be the case isn't at all clear since the teams have never met no common foe and are so closely matched in weight, speed and experience as to make any choice a mere matter of guesswork. Alabama is probably a bit more flashy and has an ace in the hole in the accurate kicking of Hayward Sanford of Adona, Ark., whose field goals have clinched victory in two tough struggles.

Smashing Running Attack.

California, however, has a smashing running attack which has never been stopped as long as the varsity team has been intact. With Johnny Meek heading the interference and Sam Chapman, Dave Anderson and Vic Bottari taking turns carrying the ball, the Bears have ripped and torn through all opposition and have every intention of doing the same tomorrow.

The Bears have confidence in their strength and invariably choose to kick off, if they get their choice, relying on their defensive power to stop the opposition from going anywhere. When they get their hands on the ball they start their smashing attack, and except for the game against Washington, which Bottari was unable to start, they have promptly started rolling up the yards and points.

This year California has scored three-fourths of its points in the second quarter. Failure to do much in the second half, Golden Bear fans claim, has been due to the fact that they have usually been ahead and haven't needed any more points and to Coach Stub Allison's whim of taking the entire varsity team out and replacing it with a complete second string for the sake of experience.

Expect Few Substitutions.

New Year's day there will be no fooling around with substitutions of entire teams. If all goes well, California is likely to play through the game with few if any substitutions.

Alabama feels the same way. The Crimson Tide in its tough games has been a hard going team with a tremendous second half kick. Its last three games were won in the last half.

Joe Kilgrow's running and passing and Charley Holm's line plunging are Alabama's chief weapons other than the toe of Sanford—and Sanford is used only in extreme emergency.

Everything points to a highly interesting and closely fought game—one that should justify the interest that produced the quickest sell-out in Rose Bowl history.

Spartans Battle Auburn; Eat Blackeyed Peas to Bring Luck

BY JAMES SEGRETI.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Dec. 31.—Large dishes of blackeyed peas and hog jowl, which, according to old southern tradition, brings good luck the year around if eaten on New Year's eve, were served to Michigan State's Spartans tonight. The East Lansing, Mich., eleven will find out about these dishes of the deep south tomorrow afternoon when it meets Auburn's Plainsmen in the Orange Bowl football game.

Charley Bachman.

The weather man reluctantly has placed his hand on the possible shower lever and there is a good program of races at Tropical Park in nearby Coral Gables, so highest estimates on the crowd which will gather in the stadium were placed at 15,000.

Despite temperatures which neared 80 degrees this afternoon, Auburn concluded preparations for the game against the Spartans with a brief workout. There was no work, however, for Michigan State, which went through nine practice sessions at the University of Florida field in Gainesville before coming to Miami. The Spartans' final tuneup was held yesterday when they gathered for half an hour on a secluded field northwest of Miami.

Blackboard Drill for Auburn.

Before engaging in their last workout on the University of Miami field, the Plainsmen were called together for a long blackboard session by Coach Jack Meagher. The Alabama squad was scheduled to work out yesterday, but buses carrying the team from Auburn, Ala., to Miami were late in arriving and the workout was canceled because of darkness after a limbering up session.

The Spartans spent the afternoon sightseeing and resting. Coach Charley Bachman, whose Florida teams from 1928 through 1932 defeated Auburn four out of five times, gloomily predicted defeat for his Spartan eleven, despite the record of losing only one game this season, a 3 to 0 loss to Manhattan.

One of the reasons for Bachman's outlook is the loss of Carl [Ole] Nelson, 20 year old junior end, who is 6 feet 2½ inches tall and weighs 205 pounds. Nelson, who suffered an ankle injury, is a graduate of Chicago's Hirsch High school.

Bremer to Fill Post.

Nelson's position will be taken by Ernest Bremer, East Lansing junior. Bremer, who competed in four sports at East Lansing High, was injured in the middle of the 1936 season, but this fall played in several games.

A colorful parade between halves has been arranged by E. E. Seiler, Miami recreation director. Twelve bands, made up of 1,100 musicians and five drill teams, will march together with a color squad carrying the five flags that have figured in Florida's history, those of Spain, France, England, the confederacy, and the United States. L. S. U. MEETS SANTA CLARA

New Orleans, La., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—A capacity crowd of more than 40,000, the largest ever to see a football game in New Orleans, will attend the fourth annual Sugar Bowl game here tomorrow when Louisiana State clashes with Santa Clara. This will be the second meeting of the two teams in the Sugar Bowl. Last year the visitors from the coast won 21 to 14.

Accompanied by more than 500 rooters, the Santa Clara team arrived this morning from Houston, Tex., where it had engaged in secret practice on Rice institute grounds, and immediately left for Bay St. Louis, Miss., to spend the night. The Broncos will return to New Orleans just before the game. Louisiana State university's team will come from Baton Rouge tomorrow morning.

Members of the American Football Coaches' association and the National Collegiate Athletic association, who have been holding meetings here, will see the game.

Louisiana, with only one or two exceptions, met a better class of opponents this year than did Santa Clara. It was beaten only by Vanderbilt in a 7 to 6 upset.

In Young Bussey and Ken Kavanaugh, Louisiana has a brilliant passing combination.

RICE VS. COLORADO

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 31.—(AP)—One squad was gay, the other surly when coaches put their Rice institute and Colorado football squads to bed tonight on the eve of the Cotton Bowl duel. Not a care bothered Rice, Southwest conference champions, but Colorado's undefeated Buffaloes were short tempered, grim, and determined as they pulled in from their Fort Worth training ground.

Rice 2½ to 1 Favorite.

Skies were overcast but the weatherman said rain during the night would be slight and prospects were good for pleasant weather for tomorrow's game. A temperature around 50 degrees was expected.

Betting odds on Rice at 2½ to 1 stood as some 25,000 visitors jammed the city. Cotton Bowl officials predicted between 25,000 and 40,000 would attend.

COLORADO.		RICE.

TEXAS TECH FAVORITE

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 31.—(AP)—West Virginia university and Texas Tech smoothed away last minute kinks today for their Sun Bowl game tomorrow afternoon.

The weather man's prediction of fair weather indicated a free passing contest.

A crowd of 13,000 is expected. Probable starting lineups:

VON STEUBEN IS VICTOR, 26 TO 25, OVER FARRAGUT

Parker Defeats Tilden Five, 26 to 23.

Tourney Facts

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS.

Von Steuben, 26; Farragut, 25.
Parker, 26; Tilden, 23.

TONIGHT'S GAMES.

8 P. M.—Farragut vs. Tilden [for third place].

9 P. M.—Parker vs. Von Steuben [championship].

Two surprise finalists, Von Steuben from the northwest side, and Parker from the south side, will meet tonight for the pre-season prep basketball championship of Chicago.

Upsetting the favorites of the semi-final round in two close battles last night, Von Steuben nosed out Farragut, 26 to 25, and Parker beat Tilden, 26 to 23. The four teams were survivors of a field of 32 public high school teams which started last Monday in the eighth annual Christmas week tournament sponsored by the University of Chicago at the Maroon fieldhouse.

The finalists will meet at 9 o'clock tonight for the title and the silver trophy, after a curtain raiser game for third place between Tilden and Farragut at 8.

Farragut, which had taken a thriller from Harper the previous night, 21 to 20, lost its chance for the championship but Farragut's captain, Euvin Dusak, retained his individual scoring lead with a total of 51 points for four games.

Von Steuben Steps Out.

Von Steuben took a 9 to 0 lead in the opening minutes on three one-hand baskets by Ivan Hechtman, a goal by Wolinsky, and a free throw by Shandling, but Farragut narrowed the margin on two baskets by Dusak and one by Viskocil. Weksler scored twice to give Von Steuben a 13 to 6 lead at the first quarter. Viskocil scored twice and Dusak once, which, with a free throw brought Farragut's total at the half to 13 points. Wolinsky and Hechtman each dropped in a basket for Von Steuben, to give the northwest side team a four point lead.

Baskets by Kulcich and Dusak and a free throw by Sutula gave Farragut a lead early in the third quarter. Von Steuben came back, however, and held a 22 to 20 margin at the three-quarter mark. Dusak scored twice for Farragut at the start of the final period, but baskets by Wolinsky and Hechtman clinched the game for Von Steuben.

Tilden Player's Wrist Fractured.

Tilden outscored Parker, 4 to 2, in the first quarter of the opening game, but was handicapped when Charles Byron, forward, fell and sustained a wrist fracture near the end of the period. Parker found the range during the second period and led at the half, 16 to 12. Four Parker players contributed to the total.

Tilden's defense held Parker to two points in the third period, which ended with Parker leading 18 to 17. Baskets by Ardon and Josedhowicz put Tech ahead, 21 to 18, in the final quarter, but Conroy's short shot, and Gill's free throw tied it up. Conroy sank a long one-handed shot, and Josedhowicz matched it to tie the score again. Wagenberg, fouled by Josedhowicz, made the winning point, then Gill clinched the verdict with a long goal.

In the Wake of the News

BY ARCH WARD.

CHICAGO baseball writers, for no particular reason, have set aside 1938 as the year in which they are going to trap Jimmy Dykes into buying a drink. . . . A committee has been appointed to devise ways and artifices. . . . Fred Hovde, former Minnesota quarter back, and Heff Herring, a Princeton star 30 years ago, are the only American football players who have won Rugby blues at Oxford. . . . Hocky players are in such demand in England and Scotland, where seven leagues are playing, that Scottish teams are offering scholarships to Edinburgh university to young Canadian prospects. . . . Friends of Henry P. Edwards, head of the American league service bureau, are seeking to learn what's distracting him. . . . During the thaw the other day Henry left his office without his rubbers. . . . Moreover, closeup study of the lapse revealed Mr. Edwards had worn down one old rubber and one shiny new one. . . . And each was for the left foot. . . . "He acts like a National leaguer during a world's series," an office wag opined. . . . Conway, Ark., high school's varsity football tackles, Lowell Roberts and Leslie Crafton Jr., weigh 258 and 250 pounds, respectively. . . . They are juniors. . . . The Detroit Tigers employ ten scouts on a full time basis. . . . It's the largest scouting staf in the major leagues. . . .

The West Texas Teachers' college basketball team averages 6 feet 4 inches. . . . The shortest man is 6 feet 1 inch and the tallest 6 feet 9 inches. . . . Gregory Zitrides of Dartmouth and Gus Zarnas of Ohio State, two of the outstanding guards in college football last fall, were born in Greece. . . . Ruth McGinis, claimant of the women's world pocket billiard championship, never has been beaten by a member of her sex and has defeated 1,030 of 1,050 male opponents. . . . Billy Evans says there is more major league talent per square mile available in the Carolinas than in any other section of the country. . . . Rex Enright, recently appointed head football coach at South Carolina, prepped at Rockford high school before enrolling at Notre Dame.

Holidays at Home.

Cheery lights a-twinklin' from the Christmas tree, gifts for all to see. . . . Homey folks gatherin' round the fireside glow, swappin' jokes and chucklin', happy like and low. . . . Mem'ry comes a-flittin' of some who used to be a settin' in that circle, long with you an' me. . . . Old songs are a floatin' with sweet melody, every one aj'inin', happy like an' free. . . . School is out for Christmas, the youngsters are at play, their glad voices ringin' make us all feel gay. . . . The old year's fast a-slipping', the new is nigh at hand, it 'pears as ho wtime's waitin' all over this broad land for folks to meet and visit, though far apart they roam. . . . Passersby.

This morning as I walked up the street
Only one person did I meet—
A blithe young lad who skipped along,
Whistling away at a snatch of a song.

He grinned at me as he passed me by
With sort of an elfin smile;
"Who IS that lad," I mused to myself,
"With that look so free of guile?"

One other soul was in the block—
Of long gray hair and a sad, slow pace
And a weary tiredness in his face.

The boy skipped on with his airy prance—
The old man sighed and glanced around
To watch the youth's lithe carefree bound.

Then I knew that the lad with the cocky gait
Was young Mister Nineteen-Thirty-Eight,
While the tired old man was Thirty-Seven
Making his slow way back to heaven!

—Jazbo of Old Dubuque.

The Night Before New Year's.

'Twas the night before New Year's and there in the hall
The mistletoe hung, for whomever might call.
The first to appear was the lad, Eddie Drake,
Whose very Bright Sayings appear in The Wake.
Then Jazbo came next, from that old Dubuque town;
He writes clever verse when he wishes to clown.
Lass o' Laughter was with him—with silvery voice;
That "Cave Man" once wrote her that he'd be her beau.

JACOBS PLANS 2 HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE MATCHES

One in Chicago and Other in New York.

New York, Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Two contests for the heavyweight boxing crown, one here and one in Chicago, and two other big outdoor cards for this city, are some of the fistic tidbits promised for the coming year by Mike Jacobs.

"Chicago may get the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling match," admitted the promoter today. "Not because the inducements from that city are being made so attractive, or because of the assurances against any boycott. The boycott business was pretty well answered by the way in which the Schmeling match here with Harry Thomas was supported, and with all respect to other cities as spots for a big championship fight, there is only one New York.

Farr to Get Chance.

"But even New York could not take two heavyweight championship matches in one summer. As matters stand Schmeling is assured his shot at the title next June. Tommy Farr, or whoever comes through as the most worthy challenger, gets a match with the champion in September. Then there is the fight between the lightweight and featherweight champions, Lou Ambers and Henry Armstrong, and, if the contest next Friday night in Madison Square Garden shows Freddie Steele and Fred Apostoli as evenly matched as so many believe, a contest between these two at weight and over the championship distance will be much in demand.

"As the boxing situation shapes up now, the Ambers-Armstrong business will be settled as the first big outdoor show of the coming year, probably the first week in June. The Louis-Schmeling battle will probably come off the last week in June. The Steele-Apostoli bout, if it is in order, is figured on for August, with the second heavyweight title match of the year the following month.

Sees Champions' Programs.

"In regard to the Ambers-Armstrong and Steele-Apostoli affairs, each of these will top carnival or champions programs. My first carnival of champions venture has in no way discouraged my confidence in such offerings. The financial failure here was due to certain unforeseen circumstances and mistakes in promotion on my part. Out of last year's experience I learned some things that will be turned to advantage this year.

"In any event, I look for a bigger and better year in boxing than ever, no matter what Jimmy Johnston, former matchmaker for the New York Garden, may do to try and hurt the game. His proposed investigation of the state athletic commission is a weak attempt on his part to disguise the fact that it was the commission that forced a showdown."

MOIR, NOWAK LEAD IRISH IN 2D HALF DRIVE

Purple Ahead, 25-17, at Intermission.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Notre Dame's brilliant second half rally last night at Patten gymnasium, during which the Irish scored twenty-three points to four for Northwestern, whipped the Wildcats, 40 to 29, in the final game of this series which always is played on New Year's eve. Fifty-eight hundred, a capacity throng, many of whom paused en route to midnight celebrations, watched the fastest game of the season.

Two weeks ago Notre Dame defeated Northwestern, 30 to 27. Last night, however, until Johnny Moir and Paul Nowak turned on full speed, it seemed as if Northwestern would rewrite that story. The Wildcats started fast and when five minutes of the first half had been completed they led, 11 to 1. Throughout the remainder of the period Northwestern managed to hold a ten point lead until a few seconds before the gun when Andy Crowe, diminutive forward, who substituted for Moir, dropped the ball through the net. Thus Notre Dame left the floor for the intermission trailing, 25 to 17.

Irish Lead in Shots.

To statisticians, however, the record of attempted shots indicated that Notre Dame had every opportunity to overtake Northwestern. In the first half, although beaten, 25 to 17, the Irish had 41 shots at the goal compared to 25 shots for Northwestern.

The same ratio prevailed in the final twenty minutes, with Notre Dame taking 36 shots to Northwestern's 18. And of those 18 shots, only one by Ad Vance was successful. This field goal, preceded by two free throws by Vance, after fouls committed by Nowak, constituted the Wildcat attack. When Vance scored, Northwestern led, 29 to 25, but Notre Dame's tightly drawn defense so harassed the Wildcats that their shots were kept to a minimum and their success was nil.

Speed Is Victory Factor.

Speed was the factor which brought victory to Notre Dame. The Irish, who had better replacements than Northwestern, went down floor to cover the Wildcats. Seldom was any player able to break through this defense, and when Notre Dame intercepted passes or took the ball after hurried ineffectual shots, this same factor of speed brought scoring opportunities.

Notre Dame didn't flash an under the backboard passing attack comparable to that of Northwestern in the first five minutes, when the passing centered around Jean Smith, but Moir and Nowak followed up with reckless skill in the second half and when Notre Dame shot for the hoop, the shooter had time to aim.

Relieve Moir, Sadowski.

Notre Dame's forwards, Moir and Sadowski, were relieved in the first half because of indifferent work. Tommy Wukovits also was replaced by Tom Jordan. This vacation may have conserved their strength. More likely, it spurred them to give their best efforts, for Moir, when he came back, scored four times from the field, and Nowak, reacting to the increased tempo of attack, added two goals to the one he had scored in the first half.

Moir cut Northwestern's four point lead to 29 to 27 and then Nowak tied the count with a follow up. More than ten minutes remained, but the result could not be doubted. Moir followed up under the backboard to send Notre Dame into the lead for the first time, 31 to 29. And with the exception of goals by Wukovits and Rex Ellis, substitute center, Moir accounted for the remainder of Notre Dame's points.

WISCONSIN WINS, 40-29

Madison, Wis., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—A profitable second half attack gave Wisconsin a 40 to 29 basketball victory over Missouri before a New Year's eve crowd of about 3,000 in the fieldhouse tonight.

The Badgers held an 18 to 16 advantage at the end of the first half on Charley Jones' long basket just as the gun sounded. That marked the first time Wisconsin had held the lead.

EAST AND WEST CLASH; POWER AGAINST PASSES

50,000 to Watch Charity Game on Coast.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Football's collegiate stars of 1937, embracing picked talent from virtually every section of the country, pool their individual talents here tomorrow to fight it out in the annual East-West charity game.

The thirteenth annual encounter to provide funds for treating crippled children at the Shrine hospital, will pit an eastern team of unquestioned ground power against a western group expected to explore the aerial lanes for the winning points. The East is a 10 to 7 favorite.

Plenty of Power.

Eastern Coaches Andy Kerr of Colgate and Bernie Bierman of Minnesota elected to emphasize a ground attack built around three members of the Fordham line and the charging abilities of Quarter Back John Michelosen of Pittsburgh; Half Back Cecil Isbell of Purdue, and Full Back Corby Davis of Indiana.

Two passing artists, Dwight Sloan of Arkansas and Joe Gray of Oregon State college, long armed ends and fleet backs, have been converted into a swift offensive weapon by the western coaches, Orin Hollingbery of Washington State and Maj. Lawrence [Biff] Jones of Nebraska.

50,000 to See Game.

More than 50,000 are expected to witness the renewal of a game which now lists seven victories for the West and five for the East. The lineups:

Chicago Preps Battle Arizona Stars, Hot Sun

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—A capacity crowd of 15,000 is expected at the Cactus Bowl game between the Chicago All-Star High School football team and the Arizona All-State preps tomorrow. The temperature will be near 80 degrees.

The Chicago squad has been practicing under a hot sun the last few days after the three day trip from home. Coaches Bill Heiland and Tony Lawless have the twenty-two men in excellent condition.

The Arizona squad, with fifty-six players recruited from every section of the state, will follow the style of most southwestern teams, in that its offense consists principally of passes and trick plays.

The Chicago squad includes a number of excellent passers, too, but it is expected to resort mostly to power formations. The lineups:

HAWKS AWAIT CANADIENS

The Blackhawks' hocky team after a 10 day eastern trip, which took them east for games with the Boston Bruins, New York Rangers, and Detroit Red Wings, returned to Chicago yesterday. The trip netted three points out of a possible six, a record considered good for a road trip.

Manager Bill Stewart allowed the squad just about time enough to unpack and then had the team on the ice of the Chicago Arena for a two hour drill in preparation for the first battle of the new year, which is scheduled against the Montreal Canadiens at the Stadium tomorrow night.

The Canadiens' battle with the Maple Leafs at Toronto tonight is likely to soften the flying Frenchmen a bit for Conny Smythe's brawny and high scoring Leafs revel in a bumping game.

W-G-N PREPARES TO IMPROVE ITS SERVICE IN 1938

New Equipment and New Programs Planned.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

A good year in 1938—that is the expectation at W-G-N. Manager Quin Ryan pointed out several things which will make the station more serviceable to listeners.

Foremost among these is the projected new transmitting station with a 750 foot radiator which W-G-N will build 23 miles from the loop near Itasca on Route 53. The new transmitter should increase the present signal strength by 40 per cent and boost the listening audience substantially.

Mr. Ryan also expected the W-G-N audience to receive added program benefits through the Mutual network's plans for exchange of sustaining features and many special events of entertainment character.

Habits of late-at-night listeners hereabouts will be somewhat modified after Jan. 15 when many orchestras playing by remote control from restaurants and night clubs go off the air rather than pay a $100 a week service charge. This charge, which major Chicago stations will assess at that time, is prompted by increased costs imposed mainly by the Musicians' union. Among the music makers to disappear will be Bill Carlsen and Dick Jurgens from the Aragon and Trianon, Herbie Kaye from the Drake, the Blackstone trio, Ralph Ginsburgh's concert group, and Shep Fields from the Palmer house, all heard on W-G-N. Only Kay Kyser at the Blackhawk and Ennio Bolognini at the Yar restaurant are to remain on W-G-N unless there are some last minute changes.

WENR and WMAQ are certain only of Earl Hines' music at the Grand Terrace, and possibly Henry Busse from the Chez Paree. The King's Jesters from La Salle, Marek Weber from Stevens, and Benny Meroff from Congress will be out; Stan Norris at the Merry Garden switches to WCFL, and there has been no final settlement as to Louis Panico at Oriental Gardens, George Hessberger at Lincoln Turner hall, and Eddie Varzos at the Bismarck.

Buddy Rogers College Inn line to WBBM is to be dropped; Orrin Tucker from Edgewater Beach probably will continue; uncertainty prevails among several of the other WBBM bands.

To fill the periods being vacated by these bands local stations are planning various late evening studio features in addition to piping in music from New York, Hollywood, and other points. N. B. C. is said to be planning a full hour music variety program to originate from local studios.

DODGE IS BITTER AS DEWEY TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

New York, Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Racket Smasher Thomas E. Dewey took the oath of office this afternoon as district attorney for New York county in the chambers of Judge Charles C. Nott Jr. at the Criminal Courts building. He succeeds William C. Dodge.

Standing beside him as he took the oath were his wife and his mother, Mrs. George M. Dewey, and several city officials.

Mr. Dodge left office on a high note of bitterness.

He spoke of attacks made on him by the press and political-minded critics, and he talked of prejudicial and snooping officials of the opposite faith. He skimmed over and defended his record, quoted the Bible, spoke feelingly of the constitution, and informed the public he was leaving the office in excellent shape for his successor.

HANGS SELF IN NEPHEW'S HOME.

Dennis E. Guthrie, 55 years old, of Raymond, Ill., hanged himself yesterday in the basement of the home of his nephew, E. H. Cook, 106 Lincoln avenue, Riverside. Cook told police that his uncle was despondent over financial reverses.

CAR LOADINGS DROP GREATER THAN SEASONAL

Total for Week Placed at 460,367.

Railroad freight car loadings during the week ended Dec. 25 totaled 460,367 cars, a decrease of 142,925 cars, or 23.7 per cent, from the preceding week's loadings, the Association of American railroads reported yesterday.

This was more than the usual Christmas seasonal decrease. Loadings were 102,211 cars, or 18.1 per cent, below those of the corresponding week of 1936, 1.4 per cent lower than during Christmas week in 1935, and 75,925 cars, or 14.2 per cent lower than in 1930.

All Groups Show Decline.

All classifications of freight declined from the preceding week, with coal and miscellaneous freight shipments showing the greatest losses. Coal loadings were 48,492 cars under the week before last and 55,646 cars below the like week of 1936.

Less than car lot merchandise shipments also fell sharply.

Grain was the only commodity to show an increase over the corresponding 1936 week, registering a gain of 3,747 cars, but the movement declined 7,687 cars from that of the preceding week this year.

Group Loadings Compared.

	Wk. ended.	—Chge. from—
	Dec. 25.	Prec. wk.	Yr. ago.
Miscellaneous	160,453	—48,250	—55,646
Mdse., L. C. L.	119,516	—26,132	—13,611
Coal	101,437	—48,492	—22,519
Grain	27,933	— 7,687	3,747
Livestock	9,555	— 4,808	— 306
Forest products	20,601	— 4,508	— 7,798
Ore	6,960	— 1,532	— 563
Coke	4,912	— 1,519	— 5,515

Loadings of revenue freight for the 52 weeks ended last Saturday totaled 37,992,928 cars, an increase of 1,930,253 cars or 5.4 per cent over 1936, the association announced.

"Freight trafic on the basis of car loadings in the last twelve months failed to come up to expectations," the association stated.

Investors' Guide wishes all a happy and prosperous 1938. We also want to take this opportunity to extend again the invitation to consult this department on your investment problems.

We make only a few rules. There is no limit to the number of inquiries any one may make, but we ask that you limit questions to securities of one company in each letter. Investors' Guide does not answer questions by telephone or in person. We conduct only a mail service. There is no charge. We ask only that you enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Our purposes are to answer your specific questions or to provide you with an understandable report, from which you may draw your own conclusions. Don't be disappointed if we do not recommend specifically that you buy, hold or sell securities. We believe it is the right and duty of each individual to decide for himself on such matters.

We make every effort to have accurate facts and figures—also to provide pertinent bits of information—but we believe it is futile to attempt to predict the course of the stock market especially, either as it applies to a single security or the general market.

Predicters took a terrific "rap" last year. Anybody could pick fairly well during the 1933-'36 period, when almost all stock of any standing at all increased in value. But few of the predicting advisory services were fortunate enough to call the turn on the sharp general market decline in 1937.

In all fairness to reputable advisory services, however, it should be said that such services have available much more information than has the individual investor. As a result, they should be able to choose securities better than the average person.

No matter what your circumstances, our advice to you in the form of Resolution No. 1 for the investor is that you learn all the important facts about a company and the industry of which it is a part before you invest in its securities. Then make your own decision.

Without in any way trying to make any predictions, Investors' Guide suggested last summer that investors be increasingly selective in choosing securities.

Remember that the Securities and Exchange commission is no guarantee against loss. Registration with the SEC merely requires full disclosure of facts with no material omissions or misstatements.

PRESIDENT CUTS FEDERAL SILVER BONUS 13 CENTS

Reduces Price for U. S. Output.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—[Special.]—A new domestic silver policy was advanced by President Roosevelt tonight in a proclamation which lowered the government price for newly mined domestic metal approximately 13 cents an ounce.

Downward modification of the administration's price pegging program came as a distinct surprise. It had been generally expected that the President would continue purchases at the price he fixed almost two years ago.

The drop in the federal price for domestic silver is expected to produce protests from the silver states. The action can be expected to have a marked effect on the legislative program Mr. Roosevelt will offer in his annual report on the state of the Union, which will be delivered at the opening of the regular session of congress Monday.

Domestic Premium Continues.

Under the proclamation the price for newly mined domestic silver was fixed at 64.64 cents an ounce. The price had been 77.57 cents. The new price still represents a premium to domestic producers of about 20 cents over the present world price.

It will represent a loss of about 7 million dollars a year to the silver producers of the nation. It will bring losses to holders of silver stock, as the proclamation is expected to send silver stocks tumbling Monday.

The domestic silver producers will still continue to draw a federal bonus through the difference between the world price and that paid by the federal government. This bonus has totaled approximately 60 million dollars in the four years of silver purchasing.

Treasury Is Silent.

No explanation was advanced by the treasury for the reduction in the price of silver. For this reason, the proclamation was seen as a tacit admission by the administration of the failure of its attempt to control the world price of silver.

At the bottom of the depression a number of "financial experts" held that commodity prices were too low because there was not enough gold to provide for the monetary needs of the country, and that foreign trade with the orient was stagnant because of the low price of silver.

The administration was convinced that higher silver prices would relieve storage of monetary metal stocks and promote trade with silver standard countries. The results of the program were anything but what the administration wanted. Instead of a shortage of gold there is a surfeit of huge proportions and silver purchases did not promote foreign trade. They resulted in so draining China of her stock of the metal that she was forced to go off the silver standard. And the price of silver failed to advance. It once went as high as 81 cents but dropped to its present level.

The silver purchase program has been a frequent source of embarrassment to the administration on another score. Each price pegging of the past has brought a flood of reports that administration friends, on confidential information, had been enabled to clean up in the market.

Foreign Purchases Unaffected.

The proclamation does not affect foreign silver purchases, which are being made at about 45 cents an ounce. Secretary of the Treasury Henry A. Morgenthau recently said the treasury is still buying foreign produced silver and will continue to do so until further notice.

Even with the 13 cent cut the proclamation leaves the United States standing alone in the family of nations in its effort to hold up the price of silver. The London silver agreement of 1933, to which the principal producing nations subscribed, expired tonight and was permitted to lapse.

The proclamation of tonight was issued because the proclamation of Dec. 31, 1933, under which the government embarked on its silver price pegging program, expired tonight. Coincidently Mr. Roosevelt, in fixing the 64.64 cent price, returned to the price he established in the first proclamation and which he had twice raised.

Two Price Boosts in 1935.

The 1933 proclamation was issued under authority of an amendment to the then current agricultural adjustment act, which was pressed through congress by the silver bloc. The amendment not only empowered the President to coin silver, but also authorized him to favor the domestic product.

On April 10, 1935, by modification of his proclamation, he boosted the price to 71.11 cents an ounce and two weeks later to the 77.57 price which ended tonight. The proclamation of tonight went into effect at midnight and is to continue until next Dec. 31. The right to modify the proclamation was retained by the President.

What It Cost U. S.

In the four years of the operation of the proclamation the government has bought approximately 175 million ounces of silver at a cost of approximately 135 million dollars. Deducting the current world price of about 45 cents an ounce, the government's domestic silver purchase program has cost taxpayers about 60 millions.

The 60 million dollar bonus to domestic producers is only a small part of the cost of the administration's silver program. In addition to

Confidence Is Recovery Key, Sloan Asserts

New York, Dec. 31.—[Special.]—Restoration of confidence in free enterprise is the only remedy for our present "political economic" difficulties, Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of the board of General Motors corporation, said today in a year-end review of business conditions.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr. [Assoc. Press Photo.]

The motor head declared that "more effectual coöperation of all the elements involved" is necessary to bring industrial progress.

"To attempt to appraise the trend of American business as we enter 1938," Sloan said, "presents the normal difficulties of any forecast, although I believe the circumstances this year are quite unusual in character and, in some respects, very clearly defined.

Picture as Sloan Sees It.

"Here is the picture, as I see it:

"We are in a recession in fact—important in both scope and magnitude. The situation may well develop into a depression, serious I believe more from the standpoint of duration than amplitude. There is no adequate justification for the situation in which we find ourselves.

"While certain economic policies are operating toward unbalancing the national economy, demanding an accounting sooner or later, the process has not continued long enough to offset the normal forces of recovery. These forces should have continued in the ascendency for a longer period. All that being the case, why has it happened? Simply because of fear as to the future of American enterprise and the rules upon which it is to be conducted. In other words, our difficulties are political economic rather than purely economic.

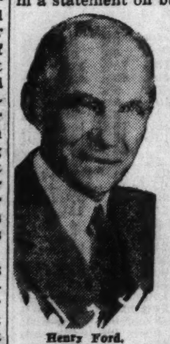
Only One Remedy.

"It seems to me that there is one remedy, and only one. Confidence must be reëstablished on a firm foundation by demonstrated fact and understanding as to objectives and methods before American business can go forward with confidence. Panaceas will accentuate the lack of confidence already existing. As to what is going to be done about it, I do not know.

"Certain it is, however, that only through a greater unity and a more effectual coöperation of all the elements involved, on sound economic lines, can a permanent basis for industrial progress be established."

Ford Is Optimistic.

Detroit, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Henry Ford in a statement on business conditions today said "there is nothing to prevent our going ahead" and said he expects to produce a low-priced tractor of unusual design within a few months. No details of the tractor were made available.



Henry Ford.

Expressing his opinion that the nation is on the verge of an era of greater quantity production, the founder of the Ford Motor company said: "Almost every reason for the temporary stoppage [of business] can be discounted. The people are naturally cautious at this time of the year because they want to know how the rest of the winter will be.

Hear Many Threats.

"They have heard so many threats that they are waiting to see. Well, that is all right," he said. "What they will see will not be as bad as it sounded.

"One thing we must learn is that we were on the right track a few years ago and left it. When we made plenty of things that people use to live, we were able to make them at low prices, and people were able to buy them, and this made work for more men.

"There is no way of changing that cycle, and no way of improving upon it—working and using and making things better and easier to get is all there is to it—and the sooner we get back to that the better it will be. There is no use waiting for some one else to start — this thing will get started, as it always has, by individual initiative."

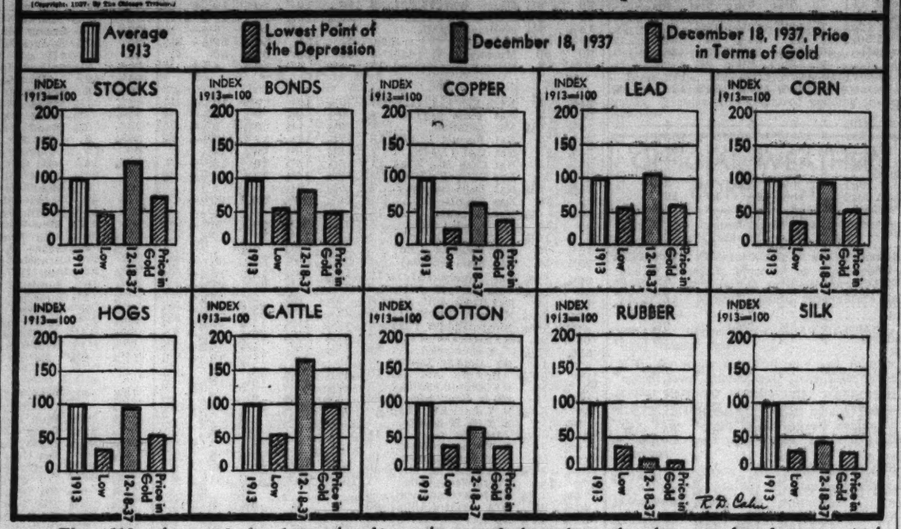
How Recent Prices in Terms of Pre-Devaluation Compare with the Lowest Prices of the Depression



The 1913 prices and the depression low prices used throughout the chart are based upon actual market quotations in terms of the then existing dollar. The Dec. 18, 1937, prices are shown in terms of both the present dollar and the pre-devaluation dollar. The dollar's gold content was cut from 25 8-10 grains to 15 5-21 grains under President Roosevelt's proclamation of January, 1934. The third and fourth bars in each graph show the prices in terms of the cheapened dollar and in terms of the old gold dollar.

Order Building Supply Price Fixing Halted

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The federal trade commission announced tonight that it had ordered a nation-wide building material supply association to stop price fixing and other practices allegedly tending to increase costs to consumers.

The effort to hammer down prices comes at a time when the Roosevelt administration is preparing a campaign to stimulate home construction through lower costs, and when administration men are declaring that "excessive" prices helped cause the economic slump.

However, the investigation on which the trade commission based its order tonight was conducted before the other two developments crystallized. The order directed the National Federation of Builders Supply Associations and its dealer members to cease "unlawful" practices which, it is charged, have tended to suppress competition.

Intimidation Charged.

These practices include, the commission said, boycotting nonmember dealers and "intimidating" representatives of manufacturers to prevent them from doing business with nonmembers wishing to buy direct from the manufacturers.

At the time the complaint was issued, the national federation consisted of forty-one associations of dealers in thirty-two states and was found by the commission to constitute a national combination.

The federation, at that time, included the following federated units, according to the findings:

The Building Material Merchants of the Chicago district; Michigan Builders' Supply association; Illinois Lumber and Material Dealers' association; Indiana Builders' Supply association; Iowa State Builders' Supply association; Tri-County division of Michigan Builders' association; Builders Supply Dealers Association or Wisconsin.

Form Letter Is Cited.

The commission's order said Lawrence I. MacQueen, secretary of the federation, in a form letter to the federated units, had praised the federation's activity in "bucking a department of the government," and thereby obtaining for dealer distribution $50,000,000 worth of goods which the government "was determined to buy direct."

In 1935, the government, through the relief administration, announced a policy of buying direct from manufacturers. In connection with relief projects it sent Ohio manufacturers an inquiry for 100,000 barrels of cement, the commission said.

The commission said that MacQueen, in a form letter, declared the government's policy of direct buying "must be stopped."

Later he reported to the federation that no cement company quoted prices, and that when the government issued the inquiry to manufacturers outside Ohio, again no direct bids were made, the commission asserted.

1937 SNEAKS OUT AMID WALL STREET BOOS TO TUNE OF 'HAPPY DAYS'

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—A chorus of boos ushered 1937 out on the floor of the New York stock exchange today as a swirling crowd of paper-hatted brokers and exchange employés threw confetti and tossed torn order slips in the air.

Three bands—a big military one from the 310th National Guard infantry at Englewood, N. J., and two swing orchestras, led by exchange page boys, furnished vociferous and variously received music in the last hour of the session.

There were such old standbys as "Boola" and the "Watch on the Rhine," loudly applauded, and "Rainy Day," which brought a big laugh from men who had watched share prices drop this week to just above the low levels of the year. Then "Happy Days Are Here Again" was booed roundly.

SOO LINE FILES VOLUNTARY PLEA IN BANKRUPTCY

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Sault Ste. Marie railroad—commonly known as the Soo line—today filed in federal court a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

Greatly reduced earnings, increased taxes, labor and other costs, and heavy bond maturities in 1938, including a $70,000,000 issue in July, forced the 3,300 mile road to take the step, C. T. Jaffray, chairman of the board, said.

Federal Judge Gunnar H. Nordbye scheduled a hearing for Jan. 29, when trustees will be appointed. The appointees must be confirmed by the interstate commerce commission and the road must file a plan of financial reorganization within six months.

Operation of the Soo line and its subsidiaries will be continued without change, Jaffray said.

American Water Works Head Lauds SEC Report

New York, Dec. 31.—[Special.]—The report of the Securities and Exchange commission on the reorganization plan of the American Water Works and Electric company was called "most satisfactory" today by H. Hobart Porter, president of the utility system.

Banks, Exchanges Are Closed Today

Security markets, most commodity markets, and banks in North America, South America, and many other parts of the world will be closed today in observance of New Year's day. In Chicago the live stock market will be open.

European security and commodity markets will remain closed. Banks will observe the holiday in all parts of Europe except England, northern Ireland, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Wales.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will publish its annual financial review in the Monday morning edition. The review contains a complete report of financial events during 1937.

It's Pop-Bang in Grain Pits as Year Ends

La Salle street celebrated with more than usual gusto yesterday the passing of 1937, a year that started with fine prospects for fat commissions and big profits, but ended with trading at a dull pace and prospects not very rosy for the new year.

Firecrackers Exploded.

Strict rules prevented undue hilarity Christmas eve on the trading floor of the Board of Trade, but no such rules prevailed yesterday. Firecrackers were exploded, missiles were thrown, and decorum was generally forgotten.

Although trading was scheduled to end at noon instead of the regular hour of 1:15 p. m., the party in the grain market started informally soon after 11 a. m. Shortly after the close, Mephistopheles, followed by a clown band, arrived on the floor with a gift laden covered wagon drawn by two horses.

Gifts Are Exchanged.

Gifts of various sorts were distributed to persons connected with the market. Adam J. Riffel, prominent broker and chairman of the program committee for the party, presented William Dunn, oldest active member of the floor, with a toy fire engine. Dunn will be 91 years old next week.

YEAR END SALES CAUSE WHEAT PRICES TO EASE

Other Grains Show Slight Change.

CHICAGO GRAIN FUTURES

	Yesterday.	Thursday.	Year ago.
Wheat	$ .89⅞	$ .90	Holiday
Corn	.61⅞	.61¾	Holiday
Oats	.30⅞	.30¾	Holiday
Rye	.71⅝	.71⅝	Holiday
Soy beans	.96¾	.97	Holiday

Scattered year end liquidation yesterday by holders of wheat futures was largely responsible for a decline of about 1 cent a bushel in that grain, with the May delivery touching 89⅛ cents at the extreme, a new low since Nov. 26. Closing trades were at net losses of ⅛ to ⅜ cents. Corn futures held within a range of about ⅛ cent and closed at the top, showing net gains of ⅛ to ¼ cents. Price changes in other grains were confined to small fractions of a cent a bushel.

Speculative interest in the grain markets yesterday was at a minimum. There was moderate buying of both wheat and corn futures which was regarded as a reflection of export business. However, reports from the Atlantic seaboard indicated comparatively little fresh business had been put through.

Foreign Markets Unsettled.

Foreign wheat markets were somewhat unsettled. Buying by shorts caused an upturn of 4¾ cents a bushel in the December delivery in Liverpool, and the deferred futures closed unchanged to ⅜ cents lower. Winnipeg showed relatively more strength than Chicago, and had some effect on the latter late in the trading session. Buenos Aires wheat futures were unchanged to ¼ cent a bushel higher.

A considerable amount of cash corn was reported yesterday as being shipped all rail from Iowa and Illinois points to the Gulf for export.

Year's Grain Receipts Else.

Receipts of grain at Chicago in 1937 aggregated 145,382,000 bushels, the largest arrivals since 1929, when they were 170,567,000 bushels, according to the annual report of Lyman C. West, statistician for the Chicago Board of Trade. Receipts of all grain in 1936 were 128,918,000 bushels.

Included in the arrivals of corn were 18,720,000 bushels via lake, largely from Argentina and South Africa.

	Wheat.	Corn.	*Total.
1937	28,106	66,737	145,382
1936	33,422	60,503	128,918
1935	21,701	55,300	†85,971
1934	23,780	92,879	112,884
1933	13,501	70,892	143,026
1932	18,898	57,425	118,008

SEC Charges 'Rigging' in Auburn Stock

Washington, D. C., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The Securities and Exchange commission ordered three men today to explain why they should not be suspended or expelled from membership in the New York and other stock exchanges for alleged manipulation of the market.

Gordon B. Crary. [Assoc. Press Photo.]

The show cause order was directed against Gerald M. Loeb and Gordon B. Crary [both as individuals and as partners in the firm of E. F. Hutton and Co.] and H. Terry Morrison. The Hutton firm was not involved in the order. The commission will begin its hearing on the show cause order on Jan. 31.

Charges Purchasers Misled.

The commission charged the three had induced numerous purchasers of Auburn Automobile stock by making "extravagant statements concerning the prospects for sensational profits by the Auburn Automobile company and concerning the likelihood of a spectacular price advance in Auburn stock." The commission said these efforts to create "actual and apparent active trading occurred between Dec. 26, 1935, and March 12, 1936.

At New York, Loeb said "neither I nor my firm has any knowledge or information of any manipulative operations" in Auburn stock. The commission alleged that the three made purchases of about 69,400 shares of Auburn, of which 12,300 shares were purchased by them for the Cord corporation and 57,100 for other accounts.

Partner Explains Deals.

Loeb said "we bought only 15,700 shares of Auburn stock for the Cord corporation and aside from these purchases neither bought nor sold any shares whatever for Cord corporation, Mr. [E. L.] Cord or any other official of the Cord or Auburn companies." His firm neither bought, nor sold, Auburn stock for its own account during the period mentioned by the commission, Loeb said.

The commission contended that the "actual and apparent active trading" in Auburn contributed "substantially" to raise the per share price from $38 to $54.25 during the period.

Reports 7,585,000 Persons Idle During November

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The national industrial conference board said today the average number of unemployed persons in the United States during November was 7,585,000, an increase of 1,200,000 during the month. The increase in unemployment from September to October was 300,000, the board reported. The November estimate includes the 2,048,000 workers attached to public works projects and in the CCC. The greatest declines were in manufacturing, transportation and construction.

STOCK MARKET GIVES OLD YEAR GLOOMY ADIEU

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 31.—Rallying feebly toward the close after an early downturn, the stock market today ended the year in a dull and dazed atmosphere, with losses slightly outweighing the advances.

Opening lower, with traders apparently unnerved by Secretary of Interior Ickes' speech of last night attacking big business, the list gave way until losses ranging from fractions to around 2 points appeared against leading issues. After a short time, however, the majority of shares climbed back slowly.

The trading pace was slack, volume for the day being 780,115 shares, as compared to the previous day's 910,000 shares. "Cash" transactions involving tax selling helped considerably to swell the total, with buying and selling to put books into the proper shape also contributing.

Armament Shares in Demand.

Although aviation issues experienced trouble in getting started, "armament" shares continued to reflect good demand. Steels and coppers were active, with final price changes mixed. Bethlehem, United States Steel common, Youngstown, Crucible, International Nickel, and a few others finished unchanged to fractionally higher on the day, while National Steel, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, and Republic Steel drooped fractions. Boeing, Douglas, and United Aircraft improved fractions while Consolidated Aircraft and Wright Aero eased off.

Carrier shares were spotty in quiet dealings, with the shares generally closed minor fractions lower. Public utility shares closed mixed in a narrow range.

Packard Active but Lower.

Motor shares were among the prominent issues, Packard Motors moving in the most active volume for the day, for a minor fractional loss. General Motors and Chrysler also gave up fractions.

Case and International Harvester were exceptionally weak in the farm implements, declining 3 and 2 points, respectively. Sears was off more than 1 point in the merchandising issues. Chemicals ruled up to 2 points lower. Oils were steady to fractions off.

The reason advanced by some observers for the relative steadiness of the market in late trading was that it was in need of technical readjustment.

It was said that following the slump earlier in the week, the recent pattern has been in line with past activity toward the year-end. Going over the record shows, observers said, that in seven out of ten years a rally was in motion as the year closed.

However, the pall that has hung over the market was a little thicker today in view of the attacks by administration spokesmen. It was apparent that the financial district was somewhat taken aback by the viciousness of the blasts leveled against business by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Ickes, nor was the revelation that President Roosevelt was in back of a drive to curb "monopolies" conducive of a better feeling.

Disappointment was the theme of many personal reviews, with the consensus that a year that had started so full of promise had yielded little.

New York Bonds.

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The bond market displayed conflicting trends in its final 1937 performance today, but a last minute runup in a few utilities and industrials enabled the averages to end higher.

Some actively traded issues losing ground were Western Union 5s, Southern Railway 4s, St. Louis-San Francisco 4½s, Penn Dixie Cement 6s, and New York Central 5s. Strong spots included Loews' 3½s, Studebaker 6s, American and Foreign Power 5s, American Water Works 6s, and Great Northern 4s.

South American bonds commanded most attention in the foreign group. Buenos Aires issues were mostly higher but declines were posted for Peru 6s and Cuban 5½s. Polish government 6s ended higher. Gains of 1-32 of a point to 8-32 predominated in the United States government list.

Chicago Stocks.

Gains outnumbered declines at the end of a quiet session at the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday, but most price changes were confined to small fractions of a point. Of the 99 issues traded, 46 advanced, 23 declined, and 30 closed unchanged. Sales totaled 23,000 shares, against 49,000 in the preceding session. THE TRIBUNE average of 20 stocks advanced 0.01 to 9.34.

Armour common, actively traded, advanced ⅜ to 5⅝, and Marshall Field common moved up ¼ to 7⅞. Commonwealth Edison slipped ⅛ to 26⅛. Middle West capital stock declined ⅛ to 5¼. Zenith Radio moved up ¼ to 13¼.

Bank Stocks.

Chicago bank stocks were mostly firmer yesterday. Northern Trust gained $10, and First National $6. Continental Illinois was quoted $1 higher. City National rose $2 and Chicago Title and Trust lost $2.
